OVER THE PAVEMENT.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY F. E. JORDAN.

Wretched and friendless, looking for bread,
Wearied and hungry, unceasing I tread
Over the pavement, night and morn,
Over the pavement, sickly and worn.
With a trembling hope I beg at each store—
Begging for work—but they want no more;
And again I face the stony street,
No harder than hearts that everywhere beat
Over the pavement, morning and night,
Over the pavement, dark and bright;
Dark with the woes of the hopeless and poor,
With miseries gorged, and more to endure,
Bright with the gaudiness, trinkets and gold,
O'er perfumed silks in chariots rolled
Over the pavement, from poverty free,
Over the pavement, so dreary to me;
E'en the dust that inactivity stifles my breath,
Begriming my rags and cringing my teeth,
Isn't half so bad as the pitiless crowd
Over the pavement, laughing and gay,
Over the pavement all the day.
Had the dust a heart, a soul, or a tongue,
'Twould plead that the wind had blown it along;
But He who ushers the wind from its cave
Impulses of God and charity gave
To those that scowl upon hapless men,
Who wake each gloomy morn, knowing not when,
Over the pavement, to get some bread,
While sickened from sorrow and pale as the dead.
Then ah! for the heart obedient to heaven,
Open to the poor, to charity given;
Let angels around it hover and smile,
No matter how sinful, he cannot defile.
Angels round such a heart—Charity's shrine—
The goal of humanity, virtue divine;
Ruling o'er each defect, weakness and all,
With power to uplift us from every fall.
But alas! such hearts are as hidden and rare
As crystolite brightness, or cherubs fair;
Yet they make our dear earth celestial and true,
Those hearts wooed to charity, no matter how few.
Over the pavement mockery my heart's grown sore,
Over the pavement I'll wander no more.

THE TEMPTED SISTERS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "NORA," "SHE WOULD BE AN ACTRESS," &c., &c.

CHAPTER XXV.—CONTINUED.

"You used not to like children," said Blanche to Pauline.

"Ah! I am a mother now," Pauline replied. "It makes a great difference."

"Your own little one is a girl, is it not?" Mr. Acton asked.

"Yes," Madame Lannay answered.

"Like her mother?" he inquired.

"More like her unhappy father," replied Pauline. "It makes me sad to look at her."

The entrance of Walter put a stop to the conversation. He greeted Pauline very respectfully, though in his heart he looked upon her as the author indirectly of all the mischief that had befallen her sister. He could not help being struck with the terrible change that suffering had wrought in her lovely face, and a great deal of his animosity departed as he noted the touching humility that marked her voice and manner as she replied to his greeting.

"I'm glad to see you ma'am," he said, as Pauline held out her hand to him. "Miss Blanche has had a long search for you."

"Never mind that, Walter, now that we have found her," Blanche said joyfully. "We shall be a larger party to go back to Reardon than we were when we started from there."

"We shall so, Miss," Walter said. "You will have to keep house in earnest."

"Oh, I don't mean to keep house at all," Blanche said gaily. "I shall reign, but I shall make Mrs. Bertram Prime Minister."

"I am sure you could not have a better," Mr. Acton said. "But, ladies, don't you think you had better rest now. This has been a day of great excitement for all of you, and you can settle all your affairs to-morrow. Look at that young gentleman, and follow his example."

They looked at little Harry, whose brown curls were resting on Pauline's shoulder, and who was fast sailing off into the land of dreams. She placed him in Walter's arms, and prepared to go.

"I think you are right," Mrs. Bertram said to the lawyer. "Blanche's roses are but sham ones after all; they will soon fade when her excitement is over."

Mr. Acton rose, and, drawing on his gloves, said he would see Madame Lannay home, and with thankful hearts the sisters separated for the night.

"I will see you in the morning," he said, as he bid her good-bye at the door. "I have much to say to you."

She appointed a time, and ascended to her humble lodging, and, finding that her father was at home and in bed, she shut herself in her own room, to think over the wonderful occurrences of the day. She passed a sleepless night, and with the earliest dawn of morning she arose and dressed herself, and waited with feverish impatience for her father's wakening, that she might prepare him for the meeting that was so soon to follow. She went about the preparations for their simple meal like one in a dream; and she had just finished dressing her child, when a knock came to the outer door, and she heard Fanchette's voice in conversation with some one. Hearing her own name she opened the door and listened. Yes, there was no mistake. It was a voice asking, in accents that struck her ear, for Madame Lannay.

Whose voice was it? The tones were strangely familiar. She pressed forward into the lobby to see the inquirer. He stood full in the sunlight, looking into the house, so that she was not seen.

"Is Madame Lannay in?" he asked again.

Pauline tried to speak, but could not. Her lips moved, but no sound came from them. The stranger saw her, and stepped forward. Her heart felt bursting, and with a wild, choking cry, she sprang forward, and clasped the extended hands of Gilbert Bertram.

CHAPTER XXVI.

RETROSPECTION—THE LINK IN THE CHAIN—MET ONCE MORE.

"Gilbert Bertram!" was the almost terrified exclamation of Pauline, as she looked into the face of her visitor.

"Yes," he said, with his old smile, which she so well remembered, "Gilbert Bertram."

She drew him into her little sitting-room, and went to fetch her father. Gilbert was shocked at the alteration in the old man, for such Hugh de Cressey now appeared, though not really older than many men in the full possession of all their faculties, and his voice trembled as he welcomed the father of her he so dearly loved, and so soon hoped to meet.

"You are very kind, very good," the old man said, with a tremulous voice, "to come and see us now. This is not like London, is it? Pauline cannot play the lady here." He seemed to have forgotten the fact that it was his own folly and wickedness that had brought him to his present state and went maudling on.

"And Blanche too—I haven't heard from Blanche for a long time. I suppose she is too grand a lady to care for her old father."

"Oh, no, dear father; not so," Pauline said, "Blanche has not forgotten you."

"Then why don't she help us?" he said, querulously. "Does she know we're poor?"

"Yes; not so poor as we are," his daughter replied. "But you shall see her soon."

"Shall I?" he asked in an indifferent tone, which told of his failing mind most painfully.

"Yes, indeed," his daughter replied.

"You see how he is," she continued, turning to Gilbert. "He is always thus until evening draws on."

"I see, I see," he answered, in a compassionate tone, fully understanding her words. "What a sad life you must lead with him."

"Oh, I am used to it now," she said, "but at first I was well nigh tempted to hide my sorrows in the grave. If it had not been for my child—my little Therese—I should long ere this have sought the death I once saved him from. Do you remember that night?"

"Only too well," was the reply; "but, dear Madam Lannay, I trust happy days are in store for you yet—your sister?"

"I have seen her, thank heaven, though it seem like a dream to me. I spent all yesterday with her."

"Then she is here?"

"Yes, and your mother and son," Pauline answered. "Did you know it?"

"Not for a certainty," he answered. "But I see you would like to know what brings me here. I will tell you, only asking one question first. Where is your husband?"

"I do not know," she replied. "He was here some time ago, but I have not seen him since. I do not know where he is, nor do I care to find out, so he will leave me at peace to work and live."

Gilbert had put the question thus suddenly to elicit from her whether she was aware of her husband's doings; but he saw from her tone and manner that she had no clue to his whereabouts.

"I have seen him since you have," he said gently. "He is not far off."

"Then he is here!" she shrieked—"here to finish the work he began so well a few short weeks ago."

"Calm yourself," Gilbert said, taking her hand; "he is not here yet, and believe me he has other schemes in view. He thinks you dead and will not seek you."

"I hope not, I hope not," she murmured. "If I meet him——"

"Be assured he will not," Gilbert answered. "But you must listen quietly to what I have to tell you. I knew your sister intended to be here, and I also know that your husband is following her with evil intent; and I sought you first to satisfy myself of the truth of something I have heard."

"The truth of what?"

"What I heard from your husband's own lips—that he had rid himself of a wife he deemed a stumbling-block."

"You heard this from him?"

"I did. I heard Hubert Lannay tell the man that is always with him that his wife lay at the bottom of the Scheldt."

"Ay, he sent me there, but I was secured by an almost miracle. What more have you to tell me, for I am sure the murder he contemplated on that day was but to be the prelude to some dark scheme of villainy."

"You are right," Gilbert said. "It is so; he is even now proposing to marry another, and to deprive your sister of her fortune."

"My sister—Blanche!"

"Even so," he replied. "It is a deep laid plot, but I can foil it."

"Then that accounts," said Pauline musingly, "for the last words he said to me ere he threw me, as he thought, to my death. He said something to the effect that Reardon would soon be his, and that I was the obstacle that prevented it."

"Exactly," Gilbert answered, "but I will tell you all I know; and you, in return, will confide to me all that you can remember respecting your husband, for this scheme of villainy must be exposed. Did I believe that you had one spark of love for this man, or that he had had manliness enough in his nature ever to excite a single feeling of respect or regard in your bosom, I would pause before I went on with the terrible work of revenge and retribution before me."

"Oh, don't think of me," exclaimed Pauline. "Don't waste a thought on me. If I loved him as my life, if seeing him suffer sent me heart broken to my grave, I would say, Gilbert Bertram, go on, and Heaven aid you! and lay down my weary life, feeling that I owed it as some atonement for the wrong and misery I helped that man to work."

"You will aid me, then?" Gilbert said. "You will not shrink from seeing your husband's name branded as a felon, a murderer, a forger?"

"Will I shrink?" Pauline said bitterly. "Have I not the knowledge gnawing at my heart, day by day, hour by hour, wearing away my life, that my husband's hand is stained with other blood than mine, and that my child will have for her sole inheritance the knowledge of her father's crimes. I know I am a felon's wife; and shall I be one whit more wretched because the world knows it too?"

She spoke excitedly, and her hearer inferred from her words that there was something in the career of Hubert Lannay that he had not yet found out, some dark phase of his life's history he had still to learn.

"You will outlive all that sorrow," he said gently to the unhappy wife, who had suppressed her agitation and looked inquiringly at him. "But I will tell you all I know, suppressing nothing, and then we will think what next to do."

Pauline listened intently as Gilbert, in as few words as he could, told her everything that had occurred since the fearful night when he first found out that her sister was the owner of Reardon. How he had overheard the plot, and attempted to secure the false will; how he had been shot by the hand of Lannay; how, on his recovery, he had found his wife no more, and his mother and child abroad with Blanche; how, starting in search of them, he had again fallen in with Lannay and his companion; had followed them, and again been an unseen listener to their plans of villany; and finally, how he had pursued the pair to Antwerp, and was there to see her sister and consult with Mr. Acton as to what measures to adopt.

"'Tis a horrible tissue of crimes," she said, when he had finished. "And this man, my husband, what will they do to him should he be taken? Will they——"

She paused.

"Oh, no!" he replied, answering her look rather than her words. "You and I are both alive, thank heaven; and forgery and perjury are not capital crimes."

"No, I know they are not," Pauline said. "But you do not know all."

"Surely there is not much more to be told of crime and bloodshed in that man's career," said Gilbert.

"Oh, but there is," she answered, "and even more than I myself know, I fancy. I will tell you what has come to my knowledge."

She lowered her voice, and having ascertained that the landlady was not within hearing, she informed Gilbert what she had found out respecting her husband's former life.

"I thought so," he exclaimed. "I was sure there was some dark meaning attached to the covered hand. There is one missing link, however. Where and how did he obtain the name of Hubert Lannay?"

"I have often asked myself that question," she said, "and I dread to think of the answer my heart would give."

"Have you any idea?"

"None—and yet——"

"You have; I see you have!" Gilbert exclaimed. "Tell me, I conjure you. Try to think of him only as he is—an undeserving felon outcast—and if you have any knowledge of his former crimes, for your sister's sake do not try to shield him."

"I will not shield him," Pauline answered. "I once told him he should rue the day he ever saw me, and I will keep my word. If ever chance brings you near enough to him, seize the diamond ring that he wears so proudly and examine it. On the inside it bears a date—day, month and year; as which time my landlady, his injured, forgiving sister, will tell you he was toiling at the galleys."

"Ha!" said Gilbert, "and you infer it was stolen from some one?"

"He told me on our wedding day it was a legacy from a dear friend," she answered. "I did not disbelieve him then, but I know better now. Galley slaves receive neither legacies nor gifts."

"A slight foundation to build upon," he said. "Do you know nothing more?"

"Yes," she answered with strange coolness. "The doctor whom I have once or twice called in to my child and my father, was the same they fetched when I was rescued from the river. He has been a good friend to me, and he told me——"

She stopped suddenly.

"What?" he asked.

"I cannot, I cannot!" she exclaimed. "That man is my child's father, and I cannot speak the words that will place a halter on his neck. No, no; ask me no more!"

"I will not," he answered. "Let us speak of something else."

He had obtained a clue! he could easily find the doctor she spoke of, and he felt it would be cruel to press her further.

"Let us speak of your sister," he said; "I must see her."

"My sister," Pauline said. "She is an angel. Are you going to her?"

"I want you to go to her first, and break the news of my being here to her, and to my mother, whose joy may do her a serious injury," said Gilbert, glad to find something likely to distract the attention of Pauline from the sad business he had in Antwerp.

"Oh, I can easily do that," she said; "I am going there with my father and little Therese. I had no idea it was so late; she will think me long in coming. Excuse me while I dress. If you will wait for me, and your way lies the same as mine, we can walk together."

"My way is to the Ship," he said.

"And mine to the Quatre Saison, so you can accompany me part of the way," she replied. "I will not be long."

She left the room as she spoke, and he remained where she had left him, pondering sadly on the pain he was destined to inflict on her.

This reverie was interrupted by a knock at the outer door. It was answered by Fanchette, who clattered over the slippery floor in her nicely polished sabots with a racket that, for the time, drowned every other sound. A voice that Gilbert thought sounded strangely familiar, inquired if Madame Lannay lived there.

"Yes," replied the cheery tones of Fanchette, "but Madame is much engaged."

"Tell her, with my compliments, Mr. Acton is here," said the voice.

"Yes, Mi'seu," said the little Frenchwoman, and was hurrying off, when another voice said:—

"And tell her to make haste or I shall come and fetch her."

Gilbert's heart gave a suffocating leap, and then seemed to stand still. It was the voice of Blanche! clear, pure and silvery as it was in days gone by. How long it seemed ago, when she would come tripping into the pretty parlor at Stonehurst to welcome his daily visit, and chide him for being late. He hastily rose from his seat and turned to the window, scarce knowing what he did, when Fanchette, who had delivered a somewhat unintelligable message to Pauline, came clattering back, and, throwing the door of the room wide open, requested the visitors to walk in and wait for Madame.

They obeyed and entered the room; he heard their footsteps, but did not dare to turn round lest his emotion should be seen.

"I beg your pardon," said the gentle voice, so well known—so long lamented. "I did not know there was any one here."

He turned at last, and the two so long parted stood face to face. Gilbert pale, grave and worn with suffering and trial, with the silver threads already mingling with the brown curls, which were once her pride to see; and Blanche, her girlish gaiety softened by her great sorrow into gentle, loving womanhood, were once more side by side. How they had both hoped and prayed for this meeting. How each suffering heart yearned for one moment's sight of the face most loved on earth; and now they had met, it was as with the shadow of an open grave between them. Gilbert looked upon her unchanged loveliness, and forgot everything that had passed since the day they parted in mistaken rage on his part, and sickening despair on hers; forgot that the world was before him to work and suffer in, and that she was the envied possessor of a princely fortune. He remembered nothing save that she was there, loved and lovely as ever; that to her gentle lips had been confided his dead wife's last words of him, and he silently held out his hands. And Blanche. What did she feel in the moments that elapsed before that silent action? That she saw before her the actual, real figure of Gilbert Bertram, she did not doubt, but the sudden revulsion of feeling almost overpowered her. She, too, thought of the death she had witnessed on that sunny summer day, and Marion's gentle face seemed to rise before her like a vision. There was no one to stand between them now—none to separate the tried hearts so long severed—and without a word she answered the mute appeal, and sprang into the arms stretched out to enfold her.

"Blanche!"

"Gilbert!"

"Not another word was spoken, and Mr. Acton silently closed the door, and sought the room of the lively Fanchette, feeling such a meeting too sacred to be intruded upon.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE DEAD RETURNED—THE GHOST AGAIN—THE PROOF—PLANS FOR DEPARTURE—THE NEW FOUND SISTER.

The bustling little Fanchette hurried off to the apartment of her lodger, and informed her of the fact that the gentleman had left the young lady with Madame, and was sitting with her old father beside her troning stove. "And talking to him just like an old friend," she said delighted, "and my father is so pleased and happy."

Pauline was too much pre-occupied to heed much of what Fanchette was saying.

"How have they met?" she asked herself. "As long parted lovers or only as common acquaintances would?"

She made all possible haste and joined Mr. Acton, who was, as Fanchette said, making himself agreeable to the old man. He looked up as she entered.

"Well, Madame Lannay," he said, "what do you mean by frightening honest folk in this manner? Where did he come from?"

"I don't know," she replied, "He appeared here suddenly about two hours since. I was as much frightened as you, I can assure you."

"Oh, it's all right," he said, answering the question her eyes asked him, not her speech. "They understand each other very well."

"Thank Heaven, I have lived to see them meet again," she said fervently.

"Yes, and you'll have to see many more happy things in this world yet—take an old man's word for it," he answered cheerfully. "This is Walter's ghost I suppose."

"Ghost!"

"Yes—the foolish fellow. In one of those outlandish German towns he frightened your sister and Mrs. Bertram nearly out of their wits by telling them he had had a call to the next world, and wasn't long for this."

"Oh, Mr. Acton!" exclaimed Pauline.

"It's a fact," he replied. "He solemnly informed them he had seen the ghost of Gilbert Bertram, though, from the manner of the terrible apparition and its occupation, it must have been a very muscular ghost, to say the least of it."

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"Why, Walter said he saw this spirit rowing one of those clumsy boats they call English boats upon the Rhine, so it could not have been altogether 'a thing of air,' as the poets say."

"We have convincing proof to the contrary now," said Pauline.

"Yes, we have, but I doubt whether Walter would believe his own eyes and ears. He is so thoroughly persuaded that it was a ghost he saw, that it will be hard work to convince him. Your sister tried to reason him out of the fancy, but to no purpose, he insists that man, boat, oars and all, were part and parcel of the same vision sent to warn him of his approaching end."

"Poor Walter!" said Madame Lannay, "we'll soon undeceive him."

"Mrs. Bertram must be thought of first," Mr. Acton said. "How shall we break this to her? Will you come with me?"

"With pleasure," Pauline said, "This will indeed be a day of joy to her, and his child too. Will it remember him I wonder?"

"Doubtful," Mr. Acton remarked. "Memory in such young children is rarely very acute or retentive."

They were preparing to leave the house when the sitting room door opened, and they heard Blanche come out.

"Pauline," she called softly.

Her sister went to her. Her cheeks were wet with tears, but the soft radiance of her eyes told that they were tears of joy.

"What is it?" dear Blanche?" she asked.

"I am going to Mrs. Bertram to tell her," was Blanche's answer.

"Just what we were going to do," Pauline remarked. "Mr. Acton and I, but it will be better told by you."

"Perhaps so," Blanche replied. "I have seen all her sorrow for his loss, and I would share her joy at his return."

"Ever thinking of others, dear sister," Pauline said. "Have you nought to say of your self? Do you not feel joy too?"

"Joy!" she said. "That is a weak word to express what I feel to-day. I cannot speak of it, sister, the future is too bright, too golden to be real. I am sure it is."

"Oh no, Blanche, not so," her sister answered, feeling a thrill of pain as she listened to her almost foreboding words. "Not too bright; you may have trials, but they will pass, and a life of happiness await you."

"I trust you may be a true prophetess, dear Pauline," her sister said, kissing her. "But come, let us go with our joyful tidings."

As they passed the door of the room where Gilbert still remained, Pauline saw that he was sitting with his head buried in the cushions of the little sofa. With a woman's quick perception she divined, at once, he would rather be alone for a little while, so she cautioned Fanchette not to enter the room till he left it. They quitted the house and sought the hotel, and, as gently as they could, informed the widow of the happy surprise that awaited her. They soon found, however, that joy can have as evil effects as grief, for the agitation of the mother was such that she was obliged to retire to her room and lie down, with Blanche by her side, while Pauline, taking the little boy with her, retraced her steps to her own home to fetch the long lost son, whose supposed death had oppressed the mother's heart with such a weight of woe. Gilbert, on finding that Pauline and her sister had left the house, surmised where they had gone, and with his heart overflowing with joy and gratitude to heaven for the rapturous meeting of the morning, descended the stairs and sauntered into the street, intending to walk slowly towards the hotel where the party were staying. He reached the Place Vert, and stopped a moment to look at some fine engravings in the handsome shop at one of its corners.

"They will not have had time to tell her yet," he said so himself. "I must loiter a bit."

The shop had a side window, looking into a narrow alley, for foot passengers only, and he stepped into the entrance of it to see more closely a water color drawing which attracted his eye. He had scarce stood there a minute when a loud exclamation startled him, and turning round, saw Walter, the well remembered servant of Blanche, standing a few feet from him. He was very glad to see the faithful fellow, and making a step forward, he held out his hand. To his surprise, the old serving man, instead of accepting it, retreated backwards with every expression of terror.

"Lord preserve us!" he ejaculated, his face blanching with fear.

"Why, Walter, man, what's the matter?" asked Gilbert, in surprise.

"It speaks!" exclaimed Walter, in terror. "Satan, avaunt!"

"Walter!" again said Gilbert, imagining that Blanche's faithful attendant must have been drinking, "come here."

"Have mercy upon us miserable sinners, cried Walter, falling back upon the Litany in his extremity of terror, and sinking on his knees. "Good Lord, deliver us!"

"He must be mad," said Gilbert to himself, "or drunk. Get up, Walter and come along with me to your mistress."

"My mistress—oh!" said Walter in affright. "No, no, I was a faithful servant to her while she lived—what can she want with me now? Oh! what have I done to be called out of this world in this fashion,"

"What are you muttering there about?" said Gilbert. "Get up.

"Yes, Mr. Ghost—I mean Mr.—Oh, I wonder if that's the way I ought to speak to him! Oh, I was quite ready the first time, sir!—you needn't have come again."

Gilbert had some idea now what the extraordinary conduct of his old acquaintance meant. Walter had not heard of his sudden reappearance, and took him for a ghost, but what did he mean by talking of the first time? He walked quickly up to the terrified Walter, and clapping him smartly on the back, said, "I am no ghost, man; does that feel like it? Why, Walter, have you no word of welcome for me?"

"That's a mortal slap, I'll be bound," said the terror-stricken Walter to himself, and he ventured a look into the face that bent over him. There was no mistake; it was Gilbert Bertram himself, and he started to his feet with a joyous shout that astonished the lookers on as much as his previous performances had done, perhaps more; for they looked upon the prayers as part and parcel of the performance of some religous vow, which the devout Monsieur had taken upon himself to execute.

"I've been making a fool of myself," he said, as he jumped up and clasped the extended hand in both his. "Why, Mr. Bertram——" he could say no more, and the tears coursed down his furrowed cheeks.

"Thank you, thank you, for your welcome, Walter," Gilbert said, much moved, "I never expected so warm a one as I received to-day."

"I'm making a fool of myself again," Walter said, wiping his eyes. "But I must go and tell Miss Blanche. It would kill her to see you suddenly."

"You need have no fear for her," said Gilbert, with a smile. "The sight of me will not kill her."

"You have seen her then!" he exclaimed, rightly interpreting the light that shone in Gilbert's eyes. "You have seen her?"

"I have," was the answer, "not an hour ago, at her sister's. She came, unexpectedly, while I was speaking to Madame Lannay."

"And you find her the same, sir?" asked Walter, respectfully.

"The same dear angel now that she ever was," replied Gilbert.

"And Mrs. Bertram?"

"Knows nothing yet of my being here; Madam Lannay and her sister are gone to break the news to her."

"Oh they will have so much to tell you," Walter said. "They will hardly know where to begin."

"Not more than I shall have to tell them," Gilbert answered gravely. "There is more trouble in store for Miss Blanche yet, I fear."

"I trust not," exclaimed Walter. "She has had her full share of them, poor lamb."

"She has, indeed," was the reply; "but they say forewarned is forearmed, you know, and in this case I am forearmed."

"Can I help you, sir?"

"By and by you can. At present I can do nothing but watch and wait. Lannay is hatching a vile plot to deprive her of her wealth; but we will not talk any more now, I am impatient to see my mother, afterwards I will lay the whole thing before Mr. Acton and ask his advice."

"Do, sir," Walter said earnestly. "I would not have any harm befall Miss Blanche for all the world."

"I will," replied Gilbert, and so saying he hastened across the Place Vert, meeting Pauline on her way to fetch him, leading his little boy by the hand.

Upon the joyous meeting between the mother and her long lost son, none of the party intruded. A long time passed before either of them were sufficiently composed to join Pauline and Blanche in the drawing-room, and when they did so the re-union was a silent one; all feeling too much for words. Pauline had returned home for her father and the little girl, and the party that sat down to dinner in Blanche's spacious saloon was exactly what she had so long desired, but scarcely hoped to see.

Pauline, too, was very quiet; she alone of all assembled there had cause for sorrow. It was her husband who had wrought their former sorrow, and sent them scattered into the world; and it was his hand which was about to bring fresh misery upon her sister's loving heart, and once more destroy the happiness she was again enjoying. Dinner over, Gilbert excused himself on the plea of business, and hastily quitting the house, he walked to the lodging occupied by Madame Lannay. He remembered the words of Pauline, that the doctor who had attended her could tell something about her husband, and he resolved to find him and fathom the dark mystery that surrounded this man to the uttermost. The door was opened by the cheerful Fanchette, who readily gave the required information, and he started at once for that gentleman's house, which was in a retired street at the bottom of the Grand Place. It was dark when he emerged from the house, but there was a flush upon his cheek, and a light as of triumph in his eye.

"I have the missing link at last," he said to himself. "Now, Hubert Lannay, my word can send you to the fate you so richly merit; aye, and that, too, if you attempt to carry out your scheme of villany."

He raised his arm as he spoke, and wrapped in his own thoughts failed to see a gentleman who turned the corner at the same moment as himself, and they ran against each other somewhat violently.

"I beg your pardon," said Gilbert, in great confusion.

"Oh, granted," the other gentleman replied. "The fault was mine."

"Mr. Acton!" exclaimed Gilbert, "you are the person I was thinking of."

"You are the very person I left the ladies talking of, was the reply. "They cannot imagine what business you can have to take you from them to-night."

"They will know that quite soon enough," Gilbert said gravely; "but I am talking in riddles to you. Can you spare me half an hour, or are you on important business."

"I am out on a kind of fool's errand, I fancy," Mr. Acton answered. "Walter came to me just now in a most mysterious manner, with a strange story of having seen, or fancied he saw, Madame Lannay's husband, and the man he used to have with him in London, go into a small restaurant somewhere hereabouts. I know Walter's faculty for ghost seeing; in fact, we have laughed at him so unmercifully about this morning's adventure that he was half afraid to tell me, but to use his own expression," "It lay on his mind so that he could not keep it in," and I have come out to reconnoitre the place a little."

"I can save you any further trouble," Gilbert said, in a low voice, "I have no doubt of the truth of Walter's assertion. The man is here!"

"Here!"

"Yes. It is a long story I have to tell you, but it is better told out of doors. Miss de Cressey has no idea of what is hanging over her, or what they are plotting."

"Plotting against Miss de Cressey!"

"Even so, and I want your advice," Gilbert answered.

And taking Mr. Acton's arm, they strolled towards the quay, and, walking up and down under the limes, which loaded the soft night air with their perfume, he told the kind hearted lawyer all he had found out, omitting nothing, not even the intelligence he had procured from the surgeon, which, in itself alone, was sufficient to consign Hubert Lannay to the hangman.

"It is a fearful history of crime and misery," Mr Acton said, thoughtfully; "and we must be careful how we proceed. We must carefully look to our own forces before we engage in battle with so formidable a foe."

"Could we not have them arrested as swindlers and forgers?" said Gilbert.

"My dear sir, Hubert Lannay and his friend are old hands," replied Mr. Acton. "Were they arrested now, you would find no proof of their crime; and what witnesses have you to prove you really observed them when you did."

"True, true," said Gilbert. "I was alone, but the attack on my life?"

"Again I say, no witnesses, the gipsies did not see the shot fired."

"True again," Gilbert said. "What shall we do?"

"Catch them in their own net," Mr. Acton replied. "Tell Miss de Cressey as much as is absolutely necessary she should know, and then go back to Reardon and wait."

"I wrote to the gipsy Pharos," Gilbert said, "from Coblentz, desiring him to let me know where to find him on my return, in case he was wanted."

"Wanted!" exclaimed the lawyer. "Of course he will be wanted. It's a fine case! a fine case," he repeated, professional zeal for a moment overcoming all private feeling on the subject. "There is but one drawback."

"What is that?" Gilbert asked.

"Poor Madame Lannay," he replied.

"You need not fear for her," Gilbert said. "She is prepared for the worst. It was from her I learned a great deal of what I have now told you."

"Shall we return now?" said the lawyer. "The sooner we are back in England, all of us, the better."

"Will you speak to Blanche on this most painful subject?" Gilbert asked, as they turned to go.

"If you wish it, certainly," was the reply; "but surely you have the right now to speak to her respecting her affairs. I am not wrong in supposing so, I trust."

"I can hardly answer that question," Gilbert replied. "Our meeting this morning was so unexpected, so overpowering, that I hardly know what passed. That Blanche forgives me, loves me, I can have no doubt; but whether the heiress of Reardon will think it expedient to link herself for life to a penniless widower, is another matter."

"My dear sir, you need have no fears on that score," replied Mr. Acton, smilingly. "The heiress of Reardon, amid all her wealth and splendor, is just the same simple hearted, charming Blanche de Cressey, that she was years ago. I am quite sure, could we read her thoughts at this moment, that she is planning all sorts of improvements and alterations in that palace of hers for the comfort of its future master. If I were in your place, I would soon find out."

"I cannot," Gilbert said. "How can I, who once cast her off as unworthy to be my wife, sue for the hand I spurned?"

"Oh, that's all very fine in a romance, my dear fellow," Mr. Acton said; "but it won't do in reality. Blanche is a sensible girl, and I used to think you were a sensible man."

"Used?" said Gilbert, with a laugh.

"Well, I think so now, then," said the lawyer. "Well, being a sensible man, why don't you let bygones be bygones, and say plain out, 'Blanche, will you have me?' Depend upon it, she'll say 'Yes.'"

"Do you think so?"

"I know so," was the answer. "That is just what I said to my Mary, not a word more, and she said 'Yes,' directly."

"But would it be prudent on her part, with her great fortune?" Gilbert remarked with an anxious air.

TO BE CONTINUED.

NEW YORK CLIPPER.

SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1870.

To Correspondents.

J. W. ABBOTT, Elkhart, Ind.—"Who receives the higher salary, Cool Burgess or Johnny Thompson, to decide a bet?"..... We don't undertake to decide your bet, but Cool Burgess claims to receive a higher salary than was ever paid to any Ethiopian delineator, viz.:—two hundred and fifty dollars per week, in addition to expenses while traveling. This is the salary which Mr. Stetson, of Boston, pays him for the summer, according to a statement now before us, signed by Mr. Burgess.

BASE BALLIST, Troy.—"Has a stakeholder any right to give up a bet without the consent of both parties, he understanding the terms bet without the consent of both parties, he understanding the terms of the bet?"..... If you mean has he the right to give up money bet on a certain event, we answer yes, when he is satisfied by the referee's decision which party is entitled to the money. If a stakeholder should be compelled to wait for the consent of both parties, there would be very little need of stakeholders.

EAGLE, Covington, Ky.—The salaries of magicians, when engaged as travel, fluctuate, depending upon their position or standing in their profession. It is a matter of private agreement whether you pay expenses or not. In case you do, it would include travel, hotel bills and the perishable properties used by him. The amount of salary for one week or longer would depend entirely upon private agreement.

PATSY HOLLIFER.—1. Dan Bryant's style of performance differs entirely from that of Billy Emerson. Dan is not considered a song and dance man in the present acceptation of that term. 2. A heavy man in a theatre plays, as a general thing, the villains. 3. We would not advise you to learn any style. 4. Song and dance men command better salaries than jig dancers.

INFORMATION, Toledo, O.—Sam Patch did not jump over Niagara Falls, but at a short distance from them, on the American side; he took the leap from a platform on the bank into the river below, and came out safe. Some time after, in the fall of 1829 he lost his life, while leaping from the Genesee Falls, at Rochester, N. Y.

W. N., Central City, Col. Ter.—Coburn did challenge the winner of the Mace-Allen fight, previous to that battle, to fight for $2,500 a side, but not through our columns. On November 25th, 1869, Joe, who was then in San Francisco, Cal., challenged Allen or anybody else to fight for $10,000.

D. S., Dixon, Ill.—Harry C. Bates has retired from the management both of the National, Cincinnati, and the Opera House, Louisville, Ky. R. E. J. Miles is the present manager of the former and George Fuller of the latter. Bates has a traveling company in Kentucky.

DAVID H. H., Camden Mills, Ill.—1. The checquer board is numbered from one to thirty-two, commencing at the top left hand corner. 2. By "black to move and draw" is meant that black is to have the first move and then succeed in making the position, or game, a draw.

BUCKEYE BOYS.—1. The Cincinnati are now regarded as the strongest. 2. Mr. C. never expressed such an opinion. The Atlantics defeated the Red-Stockings squarely in every respect. 4. Yes, in September. 5. When we have time and room. 6. Not at all.

NATIONAL Association, Philadelphia.—The edition containing the convention, constitution, laws, names of officers, &c., has not been issued. The copy of the convention manuel you have is the first edition, with some thirty odd pages of matter left out.

LOUISVILLE.—1. The question is not a proper one. 2. We never give the private residences of ladies in the profession. 3. You could make the acquaintance of Miss Davenport only by a formal introduction, with her consent and by a proper party.

H. S., Richmond, Ky.—Lady Thorn's fastest race was at Narragansett Park, in October, 1869, 2:19¾; 2:18¾; 2:21; the last being a fourth heat. Goldsmith Maid's fastest race was at Buffalo, in August, 1866, 2:19¾; 2:19¾; 2:19¾.

A. C., Rochester, N. Y.—1. We do not know where the letter was sent to. 2. New York is supplied with water from the Croton river. The water is conveyed through pipes into reservoirs that are higher than most of the houses in the city.

JASPER, Carthage, Mo.—John McDevit had only beld the champion cue for one-third of the required time, so that claim we have justly rejected. McDevit, however, is not considered quite so good at the new game as the at old.

J. L. G., Baltimore, Md.—1. The name of the United States Consul implicated in the Boulton scandal is John S. Fisk. 2. They did upon the occasion of their match with the Atlantics in 1866, but not last season, we believe. 3. Two.

BILLIARD PLAYER, Alleghany City.—Send your correct name and address and we'll endeavor to send you the rules. Witnessing the game for a short time, however, would give you a better insight than a week's reading.

J. L. L., Columbia, S. C.—Neither player can make 6, 7, 8 and two aces count seventeen in crib; because for a flush in crib all five cards must be of the same suit, and we don't see how that can be with two aces.

CHESTER COOPER, Minneapolis.—A striker running to first base, when a player occupies it, obliges that player to leave it, and the latter cannot hold the base. The rule has not been changed.

T., Washington.—The game in such case is decided by the last seven innings played, unless the side that is ahead retires their innings, and the other side equal the score in an incompleted way.

JOHN ROGERS, Philadelphia.—Your letter received. Thanks for the list, which we publish. You are greatly mistaken in your conclusions and inferences. Will reply fully by mail.

L. M. MURPHY, Bloomington, Ill.—Such a feat has been accomplished, but there is no authentic record of the result. We send you CLIPPERS for the dollar received.

M. A. X., Chicago.—From the great excitement the scandal has created it is thought that there is more behind it than has met the public eye.

ACTIVE BOY, Louisville, Ky.—1. He was a two-eyed man. 2. Dexter's one mile time, 2:17¾, has never been beaten. 3. Brown never rowed a race against Renforth.

J. M. G.—1. Yes. 2. She is divorced. 3. The lady is playing at Wallack's. 4. A letter will reach the party if sent to this office. 5. We never answer such questions.

ARE P., Washington, D. C.—1. Nat Langham fought Ben Caunt nearly four years after his fight with Sayers. 2. The CLIPPER's account of the fight is the correct one.

B. A. P., Cleveland.—If your partner took the responsibility of the trump and declared to go alone, the adversary could only score two points for euchreing him.

J. W. M., Matoon, Ill.—The fastest time in which one hundred yards has been run by a man is 9¼ seconds, made by Geo. Seward, in England.

C. D., San Francisco.—Miss Weathersby played with the Lydia Thompson troupe, at Niblo's Garden, and also traveled with that party.

HANDSOME JACK.—Johnny Thompson, during his last engagement at Tony Pastor's Opera House, received a salary of one hundred and seventy-five dollars per week for two weeks.

DANIEL SABELL, Utica, N. Y.—1. We cannot answer the question, as it is of a private nature. 2. She is a native of California.

L. G. B., Washington.—Yours was the only report received. See elsewhere.

G. E. F., East Saginaw, Mich.—1. The best standing jump on record, spirit level, is 12 feet 10¾ inches, made recently by Ned Searles. 2. Cincinnati.

J. B. O.—Heenan did not receive the stake money for his fight with Sayers—it was a draw.

B. H., Baker Cuffers, Ga.—Your letter received also for expenses in his match with Mace, but not to agree to a draw.

CHAS. MORGAN.—1. The letter is not for you. 2. J. J. Wallace is in the city, we believe, but he is not playing anywhere at present.

E. S. B., Quincy, Ill.—Mr. Dunn gives his address at Dr. Dixon's office, so that your report would be of no service now.

J. D. B., Albany.—Dexter has trotted repeatedly against Lady Thorn, but never against Lady Thorne and running mate.

ALLEN RIX.—We have no room for such a list. You will find them all recorded in the last volume of the CLIPPER.

GUST. PAINE, London, O.—Your statements are so very indefinite that we are unable to find any trace of the party.

EUCHRE.—Any player can claim the right to shuffle the cards, but the dealer has the privilege of shuffling last.

CONSTANT READER, Wesapet.—O'Baldwin was not with Felix Larkin at the time the latter was killed.

ORPHEUS.—Jenny Lind held her first concert in the city of New York at Castle Garden, on the Battery.

A. B., Indianapolis.—Louisville.—If you desire to keep out of trouble leave all such bogus stuff alone.

J. T., Marshall, Texas.—We have not received any subscriptions from either J. Bailey or Jas. Turner.

BOX 344, Pittsburg, Pa.—Letters mailed on Monday morning will not reach us in time.

J. W. LAWRENCE.—See our report of the Atlantic and Mutual match in this week's issue.

ENQUIRE.—Enquire at the office of the chief engineer for information in regard to height of pole, etc.

T. T. AND G. S.—We cannot insert notices of games unless the date of playing is given.

CHAS. J. H., Davenport, Ia.—Address Stephen Roberts, whose advertisement will be found in another column.

RED HOT BOY.—Hall never performed with Allen and Pettingill's Minstrels.

N. H.—He was reported as being seriously ill in Omaha at last accounts. See last week's CLIPPER.

MANGLES.—1. We cannot decide who is the best. 2. We know of no other teacher in that vicinity.

BILL SQUIB.—There was such a performer a few years ago, but we have not heard of her of late.

M. L. H., Chicopee, Mass.—The actual distance cleared must be measured from tip to toe.

CONSTANT READER, Allegheny.—Our advice is, to have nothing to do with it, in any shape.

FRENETIAN.—There is no reliable record of time for those distances in this country.

C. A. W., Chicago.—We should say that you won your bet, as the Amateurs did not win.

W. F. J.—A letter addressed Charles Brooks, Boston, Mass., will probably reach him.

CARRIE CROSSAN.—1. The letter is still here. 2. Look in the Circus Department.

E. E. St. Joseph.—It was published two years ago. We have no numbers left.

JOE B., Virginia City, Nevada.—Lawrence Barrett is an American by birth.

ROCKS, Baltimore, Md.—Thank you; we will be pleased to hear from you.

BETTY.—See notice in City Summary for cause of Mr. Kelly's absence.

HALLIE SINCLAIR.—We shall not make any fresh arrangements at present.

PANDY PAT.—We really cannot enlighten you on such a curious subject.

C. S. K., Brooklyn.—We are unable to decipher your handwriting.

CONSTANT READER.—He is a swift pitcher, good bat and fair fielder.

G. W. EDMUNDS, Washington.—Write to Harry Wright, Cincinnati.

A BALTIMORE READER.—Colt was not the inventor of the revolver. He only improved upon an old invention, and patented it.

CONSTANT READER, Portland, Me.—Five seconds per oar per mile are allowed the four oared shell over the six-oared.

A FRIEND OF HORSE FAIRIES.—Should have appended his name and address to the communication.

OMAHA.—Send a letter in our care and it may probably reach her.

W. H., St. Louis.—All right; your items will be acceptable.

J. KEETZ, Ashawa, Canada.—See answer to Billiard Player.

J. H., Oswego, N. Y.—Give them sound corn and barley.

E. J., Philadelphia.—We do not need any at present.

OLD READER.—We cannot say; most likely they will

ATLANTA.—Your items will be acceptable.

OSCAR PRICE.—Will be used—thank you.

W. B., Chicago.—Louis is in England.

A. OUDE.—The letters were sent by mail.

D. WRIGHT.—Apply at any music store.

OLD SUB.—The Atlantics.

IND. 'AN TALK.—Our Jim has been lately devoting himself, with the lively interest which always characterizes him, to the Indian war in the west. He thinks that any man who won't skin another out of the very hair of his head must be dreadful stingy. The boy has also satisfied himself as to the reason why the lodges of the red men are called wig-wams, and not unnaturally infers that there must be an heir apparent in each family. Pedlers among the redskins are always named Thomas, so our boy says; at least he never heard of any one but a Tommy Hawk things! The two greatest Indians, in the opinion of our boy, are "Lo" and "Behold." He knows Lo to be, and the other's name seems to be always coupled with that of Mr. Lo. Aboriginal sports are generally very Lo amusements, according to the lad's view. He thinks "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is an Indian yarn, as it illustrates "Life among the Lo-ly." He hasn't quite satisfied himself whether or not the Red Stockings base ball club is related to the Aborigines. What puzzles him in this respect is, that the savages are always denominated the Red's kins, so he supposes they must be connected in some way, especially as the ball tossers come from the far west, where they have Sarngerfests and other wild amusements. The boy also thinks the Indians to be nautically inclined, as they seem to be always seeking wharf air.

A DISGUSTED PEOPLE.—When, after we had sweltered in heat for two or three weeks, the wind came out cool and comfortable last Friday, you never saw a more disgusted class of people than venders of soda water, ice cream, Ottawa beer, and thin coats. They had had things their own way so long, and seemed to so enjoy the misery of the fellow citizens, that they looked forward to a continuance of the hot weather; but when the change came, you never saw a sicker looking set of people. Their marts of trade were deserted, and passers by looked coldly at the poor wretches within.

CURIOUS.—An exchange says that in Alton, Ill., an Irish woman lifted a barrel of corn beef, and soon after gave birth to triplets. Now we suppose that all married women will be trying themselves on barrels of corp beef.

FOURTH OF JULY is going on as we write. The day is cool, cloudy and comfortable, much to the disgust of venders of cooling beverages and ice creams, who looked forward to a sweltering day, with the thermometer up to a hundred or so. In every direction the "red, white and blue" may be seen, its stripes and stars reminding us of the early days of our late civil war. Soldiers are keeping step to the music of various brass bands and fifers, while the heavy artillery is playing bass to the shrill treble of the little revolver and pop gun. Sportive young fellows occasionally engage in a ping muss with other sportive characters, and for a time things look rosy and characteristic of the day we observe so generally, for what would the metropolis be on the glorious 4th without a fight? Our country cousins are here in large numbers, and they appear to be taking care of themselves and seeing the sights of New York town without regard to costs or consequences: many of them may be detected by the ginger cake they nibble as they move along, or the wrapt attention which they bestow upon the most common place event. As usual on this day the fire laddies are almost constantly engaged in putting out fires which break out in every part of the city, and which are emblematic of the fires that burned in manly bosoms in the days of our revolutionary struggle. Tammany has had its big talk, its big smoke, its big drink, and gone home, probably. Base ballers are out in force; the fistic element may be seen gathering at the Rink to witness Mace and Coburn in another set-to, while men with fast horses are enjoying themselves on the road in a brush with each other, or taking their sweethearts and wives for a pleasant drive in the Central Park. It's a great day, and we are greatly indebted to our forefathers for handing down to us this annual celebration. To-night New York will be ablaze with fireworks.

OCEAN YACHT RACE.—The American yacht Dauntless and the British yacht Cambria have started on their ocean race from the Irish coast to Sandy Hook. Whatever the result of the race may be, we trust that the loser will not attribute his defeat to a broken spar or any of those little "accidents" which are usually invented for the purpose of making easy the fall of the vanquished. If the Dauntless is what her name implies, we shall be very glad to chronicle her success. If otherwise, let us have no dodging around corners, getting behind a damaged rudder, or making an accidental cut through some Plum Gut arrangement. And should the Cambria sustain defeat, let us give a hearty American welcome to the man who has had the nerve to emulate the example of American yachtmen in crossing the Atlantic in a race at sea.

GOING WITH THE PEOPLE.—General Grant seems to be one of the boys; he goes on excursions, pic-nics, etc.; enjoys himself in catching the finny tribe and eating them; delights in clam bakes; takes pleasure in sitting behind a pair of fast steppers; views trials of speed with joy unspeakable, and goes to the minstrels, etc., all of which go to show that he is a man of the people, coming from among the people, and that in his elevation to the highest office in the gift of the people, he does not neglect or forget the masses for the aristocratic few. He is, in the true acceptation of the term, a Democratic President, and we cannot understand why it is that so many of the newspapers are trying to pick him to pieces. Have any of them been disappointed in their aspirations for office or in getting their fingers in the public pap?

THE HEALTH of New York city in hot weather is not the best, if we may be permitted to judge from the city inspector's report, by which it appears that there were seven hundred and twenty-six deaths last week, being an increase of two hundred and fifty-four over the previous week. This is a frightful increase for one week, and to a certain extent may be traced to the filly-ventilated places in which thousands of the poor classes reside, as well as the crowded and filthy condition of many of our tenement houses.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL TOURIST'S GUIDE.—This is a useful little work for those contemplating a trip across the continent to California. It gives a description of cities, towns, stations, forts, etc., on the line of the railroad from the Atlantic to the Pacific, illustrated with wood engravings of the principal points of interest. G. A. Crofut & Co., 21 Park row, New York, are the publishers, and the American News Company are the wholesale agents.

OUR JIM tried his hand at base ball the other day, and didn't succeed; a fly came out to bother him, which he went for in gallant style, but misjudged, and he received the thing fair in the stomach, doubling him up; he kept his presence of mind, however, and having a strong remembrance that a bit below the belt was not fair, he yelled out "foul!" at the top of his voice. He has since retired from base ball as a profession.

SPORT ON THE MISSISSIPPI.—The steamboat races on the Mississippi, which used to be so popular before the war are about being revived, the first exciting match of the season taking place last week, as may be seen by our report in another column. A boat was blown up occasionally in the past, to give variety to the sport, and we suppose the innovation may be tried on during the revival. For a man or woman fond of the lively and exciting, these Mississippi races are just the thing.

AN ICE CHANGE.—For years the people have been in the enjoyment of what they called a "big thing on ice." Now, ice is about to have a big thing on us, the holders of that luxurious congealment putting up the price to suit them, selves. With the thermometer up to 90, it is very well to say "keep cool," but how are we to do it without ice?

THE LAW MAKERS of Iowa did a good thing in passing a bill allowing to railway passengers three dollars for every day's unreasonable delay of their baggage. Much tribulation and loss are often caused to travelers by having to wait too long for their effects; so if this bill effects a cure of the evil it will be a benefaction.

JUST SO.—The telegraph informs us of a hitch in the fistic match between Allen and McCoole, and that Allen's representative had received forfeit of the money already up. Did anybody believe that this match would ever come to a head-punching?

THE SEVENTH REGIMENT, on their visit to Philadelphia on July 14th, will have a band and drum corps numbering over one hundred musicians.

PHILADELPHIANS claim that they have more churches than New York has. We believe it's true, but it's also true that they need more.

REVEREND SPURGEON says that he has no intention of visiting the United States. That's bad for Spurgeon.

THE COOLIE QUESTION is growing extremely warm, and "John" is likely to be "the coming man."

THE NEW ORLEANS FIREMEN.

THEIR CHALLENGE ACCEPTED.

The defiant announcement on behalf of the members of Mechanics' Engine Company No. 6 and Hope Hook and Ladder Company No. 3, of the Crescent City, at present on an eastern tour, has stirred up the lads who "run with der masheen" in this vicinity, and 'tis probable that the visitors will be afforded several opportunities of showing the extent of their abilities in opposition to their brethren of the east. We hear that several of our metropolitan companies are considering the propriety of tackling them, while the fire laddies of Newburgh are said to be desirous of meeting them, but the following is the only official acceptance of the challenge issued by our visitors from the "Louisiana lowlands."

SIR:—I notice in several of the daily papers that Mechanics Engine Company No. 6 and Hook and Ladder Company No. 3, of New Orleans, are now on a visit North, and have issued a challenge to compete with any engine or hook and ladder company in any of the Northern states. They claim that they can make better time, get to work quicker and elevate their ladders in shorter time, for any amount of money that a competitor may name. I would most respectfully state that I would make a match with them for from $500 to $5,000, both on engine and truck, one man to every hundred pounds weight of apparatus, in running and getting to work, and I will name two companies in my department. Respectfully,

JAMES CURREN, Jr.,
Chief Engineer Hoboken Fire Department.

We doubt not that our visitors will agree to the above proposal, and that ere our next issue we shall be favored with something novel in the shape of a fireman's race, which we are confident would prove highly interesting and draw together a large number of persons.

THE NEW ORLEANS FIRE LADDIES.—In our issue of last week appeared a notice that the Mechanic Engine and Hope Hose companies, of the Crescent City, were en route to the metropolis, and contemplated visiting other cities in their tour the different principal cities of the East and West. On the 30th ult. they arrived at Philadelphia, and were honored with a most brilliant reception by their brother firemen, over forty companies forming in line and the procession being one of the finest witnessed in the Quaker City for many years. The procession over, they were escorted to the American Hotel, where accommodations had been provided for them during their stay. They express themselves highly pleased with the cordial welcome received, and we are confident it will not soon be forgotten. We trust they may have equal cause to remember with gratification their visit to Gotham during the present week.

"THE SEVENTH" TO VISIT PHILADELPHIA.—A few days ago a letter was received by the commanding officer of the 7th Regiment N. G., S. N. Y., signed by Hon. Daniel M. Fox, Gen. Chas. M. Prevost, Jay Cooke & Co., McKean, Borie & Co., Geo. W. Childs, Maj. J. F. Tobias, and other prominent residents of Philadelphia, inviting said organization to pay a visit to Quakerdom, to which a reply has been forwarded by Col. Emmons Clark, accepting the invitation and thanking, on behalf of officers and men, those who extended it. He designates the 14th inst. as the date, when another of those parades for which the City of Brotherly Love has become famous will take place. We presume the blooming lasses of "Philly" are in a flutter of excitement over the affair, and will turn out en masse to greet the crack regiment of New York.

CORRECTION.—We are very glad to learn that the notice in our last of the death of the wife of Michael Phelan, of billiard fame, was incorrect, that lady being in the enjoyment of the best of health. The report originated in the daily papers through the decease of a Mrs. Catharine Phelan, wife of another Michael Phelan, and who was supposed to be the wife of the well known billiard cable manufacturer.

Squibs and Things.

— Not long since a Massachusetts lady objected to her husband going on a fishing excursion because "he was very apt to be drowned when he went on the water, and besides he did not know how to swim any more than a goose." He didn't go.

— A female teacher at New Albany, Ind., aged 15 years, advertises for a situation to teach three languages, and says she is "willing to assist in the housework of the family" with whom she may be engaged. Guess she'll get along.

— Ada T. Myers was married at fourteen years old, and in six weeks was divorced; at seventeen she was seduced, and now prays that her seducer be induced to make "reparation" for the "irreparable" injury he has done her.

— Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Steinberg, of Missouri, who were married a short time ago, and were each twenty-two years of age, died within a few minutes of each other a few days since. Wonder what ailed 'em.

— A pair of nineteen year old lasses lately purchased and stocked a farm in Warren Co., Indiana, and now one of them attends to the household duties and the other manages affairs outdoors.

— Dwelling houses with all the modern conveniencies are now understood to have bowling alleys in the cellar, a billiard table in the basement, and a croquet "ground" in the attic.

— An old lady was recently arrested in Pittsburgh for stealing a bible. Her excuse was that her own was printed on such fine type she couldn't get any consolation out of it.

— New York is surfeited now-a-days with "foreigners" who style themselves "barons," etc., and they are "barren" enough, many of them, so far as "brains" and "character" are concerned.

— A chicken was lately hatched in Connecticut which has one head, two bodies and four legs. The head is said to be kept constantly pecking to supply the food necessary for two bodies.

— The little steamer of City of Ragusa, which left Liverpool on the 31st of May, for a voyage across the Atlantic, arrived at Queenstown on the 12th of June. She had sprung aleak and put back for repairs.

— The annual income of A. T. Stewart is reported to be $1,420,000; W. B Astor, $1,273,000; H. T. Helmbold, $182,000; James Fisk, Jr., $65,000; and Cornelius Vanderbilt $40,000.

— For "putting lizzards in her pillow" and "dancing voudon" before her, one dark complexioned belle had another of the same persuasion arrested a few days ago in New Orleans.

— A lady of New Hampshire aged thirty-one years is the maternal progenitor of a youth aged twenty-one. So the census enumerator says, and he has the lady's own word for it.

— A Boston tulip tree covers a quarter of an acre and contains fully a thousand tulips. New York might, perhaps, be able to do as well if she could find a quarter of an acre of land unoccupied.

— The debt of New York city is about $30,000,000; the property held as security for its payment is valued at $200,000,000—not including Central Park or the Croton waterworks.

— A lady of South Adams, Mass., aged 52 years, is the mother of nine daughters—and now varies the monotony by bringing forth a boy. Does she expect to continue in the "boy business" till they number as many as the grain?

— A horse in Plymouth, Mass., was not long ago "frightened to death" at sight of an elephant," for which the owners of the huge beast were compelled to pay the value of the horse.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP DISPUTE.

THE ATHLETIC SIDE OF THE STORY.

The Athletic club, through their President, Jas. N. Kerns, have sent us a long communication in answer to the article in last week's CLIPPER about the championship squabble, in which they present some strong evidence and give some new facts bearing upon the question in their favor. In this communication they open their case by publishing the following letter, the first of which is a formal challenge to play the Atlantics, as follows:—

PHILADELPHIA, April 7, 1870.

DEAR SIR.—I am instructed by our Directors to challenge the Atlantic Base Ball Club to play a series of home-and-home games, the first game of the series to be played on our ground in Philadelphia, on a day mutually agreeable; the second game to take place on your ground, and alternate in this manner until it shall be played on neutral ground. An early answer to the above will greatly oblige,

Yours, truly, ALFRED H. WRIGHT,
Cor. Sec'y Athletic B. B. C.

To JOHN C. CHAPMAN, Esq., Cor. Sec'y Atlantic B. B. C., of Brooklyn.

In reply to this challenge, a letter was received from the Secretary of the Atlantics, as follows:—

BROOKLYN, April 12, 1870.

A. H. WRIGHT, Esq., Cor. Sec'y Athletic B. B. C., PHILADELPHIA, PA.—DEAR SIR.—As we understand it, this proposed tournament is to settle the question of the championship; therefore, until that arrangement is definitely settled, I shall prefer to defer answering your letter of April 7th. With best wishes for yourself personally, and for the Athletics of 1870. Yours, truly,

Post Office Box 214. JOHN C. CHAPMAN.

JOHN C. CHAPMAN, Corresponding Sec. Atlantic Base Ball Club.—DEAR SIR.—Your communication of the 12th was received and laid before our Directors, and I am instructed, in reply, to say that we are willing to let the question of championship be settled in the coming tournament, but, as the season is so far advanced, think that should interfere with our regular series, and are anxious to have your club arrange with us a series of games, to be played as early in the season as possible—say the beginning of June—and whatever the result of the proposed tournament we will guarantee to play you a second series later—say August or September—and, as two series of games would be mutually advantageous, I would respectfully ask that your club give this an early consideration. Hoping that the Atlantics may have a brilliantly successful season, and that we may meet often on the ball field.

Yours truly, A. H. WRIGHT, Cor. Sec. Athletic Club.

The letter says: "The above letter does not mention a word about practice games, and only asks for a second series in case the proposed tournament should come off, by which they were willing to settle the question of championship. As the tournament never came off, the championship necessarily was decided by the first two games of the regular series, and as regards the two series of the Atlantics never consented to play more than one series, as will be seen by the following letter:—

BROOKLYN, April 29, 1870.

A. H. WRIGHT, Esq., Corresponding Sec. Athletic Base Ball Club, Philadelphia, Pa.—DEAR SIR.—Yours of the 19th inst. came duly to hand, and in reply I would state that we accept your challenges to play a series of games, and as we intend to visit Philadelphia the last week in May, we propose to play you the first game of the series on Saturday, May 28th. If the above day will suit you please answer as soon as possible, and oblige, yours truly,

JOHN C. CHAPMAN.

In reference to the rule of the game prohibiting more than one regular series of games, we shall comment specially on that subject in our next issue. Suffice it to say, that the rules have never recognised two series of matches in one season as regular.

The new point made by the Athletics is in regard to the first game being rendered null and void by the rain. In referring to this it is said:—

The first game of the series between the two clubs was played on the 30th of last May, the date having been changed by mutual consent, and the Athletics came off victorious by a score of 18 to 13. An attempt is now made to call this game null and void on account of rain, although the fact is that five innings were completed before the rain fell five minutes; and the Athletics, being then ahead, can legally claim the game on the fifth innings. This fact at once upsets the 'nice little game' of the Atlantics, who had hoped, by a technicality, to escape a defeat. The rain did not interfere at all with the game, as may be judged by the fact that neither club asked for a discontinuance, and the umpire allowed the game to proceed. The Atlantics acknowledged at the time being fairly defeated, and not a word was ever mentioned about its being a practice game.

In regard to the postponed match the Athletics state:—

As the Athletics wished to arrange for the 9th ult. a game with the Haymakers, of Troy, N. Y., who were then on a tour, they asked the Atlantics if they would consent that the date of the return game be changed from the 10th to the 11th ult. The Atlantics replied to this, stating that inasmuch as they could not play on the 11th ult., the game was off for the present. The Secretary of the Athletics immediately telegraphed back word that they were willing to play on the 9th ult., and that they would be in Brooklyn on that date, and that the game must be played. This was on the 6th ult., and the Atlantics had just been defeated by the Haymakers, and were in a very demoralized condition; and they telegraphed back that they had arranged a game with another club on the 9th ult., and that the Athletics need not come on. The Atlantics arranged a game with a tenth-rate club of Brooklyn, called the Athletics, and although they knew, on the 6th ult., that they were not going to play the Philadelphia Athletics on the 9th ult., yet they allowed the public to remain in blissful ignorance of that fact, while the newspaper and poster announcements of the game with the Philadelphia Athletics were allowed to remain unContradicted. The Athletics could have gone on to the ground and claimed the ball on the 9th ult., but they knew that the public would give them no credit for a victory so obtained. Two of the Directors of the Athletics then proceeded to Brooklyn and finally induced the Atlantics to consent to play the return game on the 20th ult.

We had our information from Mr. Decker, who, it is said, was present when the Athletic Directors agreed to the series of practice games. As regards Mr. Abel's signing the paper the Athletics say:—

On the 20th ult., before commencing the return game, the five Directors of the Athletics were severally asked to sign a paper, agreeing that the games should be called practice ones. This they positively refused to sign, with one exception, Mr. John Abel, who signed it with the express understanding that the paper would not be used in case the signatures of the other four Athletic Directors could not be obtained. Mr. Abel is not, and never has been, chairman of the board of Athletic Directors, and is not in the custom of making matches for the club, and the Atlantics are guilty of a contemptible piece of forgery in adding the words "Chairman Board of Directors," after Abel's signature. The game was played, and the Athletics won the championship of the United States, and this title will be cheerfully accorded to them by all unprejudiced persons. Severn's—the umpire's—statement that the game of May 28th is null and void, does not make it so, and he had no authority to call the game in question, and he should then have stopped the game, if it was raining, as the Athletics were willing that the game should be called. Severn is guilty of a deliberate falsehood when he says that the game was only played to oblige the Athletics, as neither club binted at a postponement.

This is the substance of the communication in behalf of the Athletics, and we leave the question as it stands, simply stating that we have no "partisan feelings" in regard to it than if the two clubs were complete strangers to us. It is to be regretted that the two clubs should have had such a dispute.

TOUR OF THE "WHITE STOCKINGS."

CHICAGO vs. HARVARD.

It was expected that the meeting between the "White Stockings" and the Harvard nine, which took place on June 30th, would be productive of a more exciting contest than had been witnessed since the advent of the former in the field. On the contrary, the game possessed less interest than either of the preceding, and resulted in the most disastrous defeat which the Harvards have yet received. Of the "White Stockings'" play too much cannot be said; their batting was very heavy, and this, with their splendid fielding, not only helped up their score, but kept the Harvards to a very low figure. The Chicago nine played the strongest game ever seen in Boston. All did finely, and errors were not frequent. Craver showed some of his grand catching, while Meyerle bothered the "boys" and pitched the whole game. Of the Harvards, something was wrong. Bush pitched for six innings, and part of another. Good win they batted for 14 runs, Bush putting out 30 for them on his effective slows. White did very well indeed; Bush only did himself justice in the field; Reynolds made a couple of pretty catches; Wells, a fine fielder, was tried on second; Bush worked hard, and did the best on his side. Perrin, at first, was good, but the base throwing was bad. The umpire had many close decisions—too many in fact. The game was rather tedious, as the pitching was not kept down quite enough. The day was a good one, and the Union Grounds were well filled.

PASTIME vs. UNKNOWN.

The "Amateur Olympics," of Washington, D. C., visited the Monumental City on the 30th of June, and under the name of the "Unknown" played the Pastimes, by whom they were badly beaten. The Pastime batted and fielded finely in the first two innings, and then, thinking they had an easy thing of it, played very loose for the next two; but on the 5th went to work again with a will, scoring 26 to 2 in the remaining five innings. The Pastimes were short their fine short stop, Annan, whose place was well filled by Southard, from the junior nine, who not only fielded in style, but batted one of the longest balls ever struck on the ground. Turnbull's pitching was very effective, as was also Reese's play on second; likewise Chenowith and M. Donald's in the field and 1st base. Reach's play at short stop was particularly fine; on the second innings he took a hot liner from Southard's bat, by which a brilliant triple play was made. The rest did nothing worth speaking of. The latter club is ready to receive challenges from all quarters. The secretary's address is Jas. E. Henley, box 851, Edwardsville.

CINCINNATI vs. FOREST CITY OF ROCKFORD.

The Forest City Club, of Rockford, Ill., reached Cincinnati, O., on July 2d, to play two games. The first game took place the same afternoon before a large audience, although the weather looked rainy. George Wright did not play, owing to lameness; his place at short was taken by Harry, and George himself was induced to act as umpire. Our correspondent sends us the following account of

THE GAME.

First Inning.—Cincinnatis lost the toss and went to the bat. McVey hit a slow bounder to Foley, and got to first as soon as the ball. Gould went to first on three balls, after having had two strikes called, the umpiring being very strict. Each man then stole a base, McVey narrowly missing an out at third. Waterman was taken finely on the foul bound by Foley, after a hard run back of third. Allison, by a good hit to left, brought Gould and McVey home and took first himself. H. Wright made first on a grounder through Doyle's fingers, Allison getting second. Leonard put Allison to Wright to third, and went to second on a safe grounder to right. Brainard made first, sending Wright home on a safe fly behind first. Sweasy was aided by Addy. Dean made first on a short fly to right center, Brainard going to third, where he was left by Dean, getting caught trying to steal second. Five runs.....Addy took two bases on a heavy fly clear over Leonard in left field, and got home when trying to steal third by an overthrow of Allison's. Hastings hit to Harry Wright, who threw short to Gould, and the latter muffed the bounder; he was put out, however, by running just as Barnes hit a foul, and could not return in time. Barnes was beautifully fled by Sweasy on the foul run. Simmons hit safely to centre for one bag. Foley's foul to left. Sold was splendidly taken by Leonard. One run.

2. McVey tipped out; Gould hit to Doyle and went out; Foley to Smith. Waterman nearly as bad during to the first inning. Not a base made.....Barstow was taken on the foul bound by Allison; Spalding struck out, and Doyle's fly was taken by Leonard. No base.

3. Allison made his base on a hot liner, which Barnes failed to hold; he was forced up and put out, when Wright hit to Spalding, who passed it to Addy; Addy took to Leonard's fly; a wild pitch gave Wright third. Brainard flew out to Doyle. Whitesock Cone got second on a fair fly to right, Addy's foul fly went to Waterman; Hastings flew out to Wright; Barnes took second and spat in Cone by a nice daisy cutter to left; Simmons hit just the same, with the same result; Foley got a life on Waterman's miss of his grounder, Barstow struck out. Two left and two runs.

4. Loose play gave the Rods five runs; Sweasy, Dean, Gould, Waterman and Allison scoring; Leonard and Dean earned bases and Sweasy and Gould were thrown out at the home plate by McVey, Wright coming over the outs. The Rockfords made two, Doyle and Cone scoring, Brainard muffing a fly and several wild throws being made; Spalding, Barnes and Simmons were the outs. Leonard took another fly.

5. Barnes commenced pitching, Spalding going to centre field, Simmons to second and Addy to short. Waterman and McVey were put out by Simmons; three base hits first, and Gould was handsomely fled by Spalding; Dean made the only run after a fine three base hit over centre. The Rockfords made three, Foley, Spalding and Doyle doing them. Leonard made a superb one-handed catch of a liner from Hastings; Addy and Barstow were the other outs.

6. Two runs for the Reds—Wright and Leonard—Spalding took a long fly from Allison; Leonard made a heavy three base hit over right centre. Brainard, Waterman were the other outs. Barnes was given a run; Spalding and Doyle were handsomely fled by Leonard and Dean. Simmons was put out at first by Sweasy, Foley and Barstow were left.

7. Spalding went back to pitch, Barnes Addy and Simmons resuming their positions. Dean got on first on the only run. Sweasy was forced out at second by Dean's hit; McVey was taken on foul fly by Hastings, and Gould had three strikes called, only one of which was struck at. One run for Rockford—Cone's. Dean made a spiker at second on the back run of Barnes' fly to Waterman. Allison fled to Foley on a catch on the back run of Sweasy's fly, and Waterman was forced out at first by Foley to the r... man. Score, 14 to ....

8. A whitewash, with Allison and ... right left, Waterman fouled out, and Leonard and Brainard were fled by Addy and... by Whitewash, with Doyle and Spalding left; Foley was fled... by Barstow and Cohen went out at first, by Wright and Waterman.

9. No base made. Sweasy went out at first by Barnes. Dean fouled out, and McVey was fled by Sweasy.....Forest Citys made three. The three runs made before a man was out, with Simmons on third. Foley hit to Waterman, who sent it home, cutting off Simmons and letting Foley to first. Barstow and Spalding were then fled by Sweasy and Waterman. The umpiring was sharp and fair. The following is the score:—

ALPHA, OF BROOKLYN, vs. ROSE HILL, OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE.

The Rose Hill nine of St. John's College, Fordham, N. Y., have this year taken a leading position as one of the strongest college nines of the country, their defeat of the Yale nine being an event which gave them the lead next to the champion Harvards. On July 2d they were engaged to play with the Stars, but the latter withdrew from their engagement, and induced the amateur Alphas to take their places, and accordingly on Saturday, July 2d, Capt. Fred. Crane, of the Alphas, mustered his forces on the Union grounds, Brooklyn, and finding the Rose Hills on hand in full force, clad in their handsome uniform of white knee breeches, shirts and caps, and lake-colored stockings, he ranged his "blues" against them. The weather was rainy and the two clubs only had time to play the shower stopped, and it was therefore not until after four P. M. that "play" was called, the Rose Hills being sent to the bat. Trempe opened with a ball to Crane, but Fred. being a little rusty failed to handle it, and this error and an over throw by James allowed the Rose Hills to score two runs. On the other side good hits by Moody and Fredericks, led to a score of one run, the Collegians closing the innings with the lead. In the second innings the College boys earned two runs, and by errors allowed the Alphas to take the lead from them by a score of 6 to 4, but this advantage was offset by a gain of 6 runs in the 3d innings, the Alphas retiring for 2 only, they thereby losing the lead, the innings closing with the Rose Hills at 10 to the credit of the Rose Hills. In the next three innings the play on both sides was very good, the fielding being quite sharp. In the 3d innings Burns went on to pitch in the place of Swayne, although there was no necessity for the change, as but one run had been earned off his pitching in two innings, and when Burns began to pitch the Alphas punished him for two runs. Afterwards, however, his pace seemed to intimidate them. On the other side, Stark and Hillyer changed places, and in four of the five innings in which Stark pitched the Rose Hills did not earn a run. The score, at the close of the 5th innings, stood at 12 to 9 in favor of the Rose Hills; but in the last three innings they batted the lively ball over the field for 17 runs, and putting out the Alphas for 6, finally came in the victors by the totals of 29 to 14.

The weak points of the Alpha nine were at right field and in the pitcher's position. Cox dropped or misjudged nearly every ball which came to him, and did nothing at the bat, he getting his base once only, and then by an error. Hillyer pitched in that thoughtless style of his which is anything but pitching. He is too hasty, and strives too much for speed, and the result is plenty of wild pitching and passed balls. Burns and Hillyer proved alone, neither he nor Hillyer having the least idea where the ball will go when it leaves their hands. Of course this is not pitching. The catching on both sides was excellent, Moody doing wonders with a lame hand and against a fearfully wild delivery, and Gleavy showing great pluck and skill in facing the hot balls from Burns. McDermott fielded finely at second base, and McManus at first base, while Dooley and Villa made beautiful catches in the out field. On the other side Hall's third base play was noteworthy, as also the base play of Crane and Stark, Remsen and Frederick making good catches. McDermott and Trempe spoiled their batting score with long hits to the outer field, and Hillyer, Hall and Moody did the same thing; the best batting was done by Gallagher and Hall, both making sharp ground hits, which it was impossible to get at in time. The umpiring, though impartial, was a model of incompetency in other respects. Though the rules expressly require that the umpire shall call every unfair ball, he allowed ball after ball out of all reach of the batsman to be sent in without being called. This, in an umpire, shows either ignorance or a stupidity in adhering to his own opinions in direct opposition to the rules. We append the full score:—

OLD POINT vs. ACTIVE.

The second game of a series of base ball was played between the Active and Old Point clubs, at Fort Monroe, on Saturday, the 25th of June. A hard rubber ball was used, which accounts for the large score obtained. Notwithstanding, some excellent plays were made, the handsome display made by Ware at short stop, and subsequently as catcher, where his play was marked by a sharp fly-tip taken with one hand off the bat, being the leading feature. Bodell's pitching was as effective as usual, but he failed to receive proper support in the field. The pitching of Wissig and the batting of Joyce were noticeable on the Active's side. Findlay distinguished himself by several well taken fly-catches at centre field. Welsh, of the Old Points, made a superb catch, running forward at full speed and taken very low. The total scores obtained in the 23 games played were 738 to 345; an average of 32 runs to a match and over.

ATLANTIC vs. UNION.

The first of the regular series of matches between these clubs for the championship—now claimed by the Athletics—was played at Tremont, July 1st. The contest was marked by some loose play by the Unions, who otherwise might have won, as the Atlantics were obliged to enter the field short the services of Ferguson, he having injured his hand. The fact that it was not a first class contest in regard to the display prevents our usual detailed report. The score below gives the particulars:—

STAR vs. OLYMPIC.

Although much has already been written regarding the difficulty between the Stars, of Brooklyn, and the Olympics, of Washington, we make room for the following letter from our regular correspondent, penned in his own vindication. Hereafter, however, we must close our columns to further discussion of the matter, as our readers have tired listening to the story, as told by the opposing sides:—

EDITOR CLIPPER.—I think the subject of the Star-Olympic game is about played out, having been corrected by both clubs, please allow me to say a word in reference to the statement of the Stars. I make due allowance for the statements of persons seeing the same play, but I say that my report was a biased one I persons seeing the same play, but I say that my report was a biased one I have taken pains to assure me of it. Now, as I have taken my position for seeing the stated facts, simply as they occurred, and not as I said myself, after the play was as good as any, as I sat behind any crowd that day. Furthermore, I can back up my statement by 10 people in the crowd, who were not Olympic men. What I aimed at was to give the facts and allow the public to judge of the true merits of the case. Mr. Jewell, of the Olympic club, and published in the CLIPPER of June 26th? If so, what has he to say to that? I am not surprised that Mr. Jewell cannot see that Cline was out, as he is more than one, as showed his ignorance of the rules while in Washington. I had a discussion with him the day before the match, in reference to the umpire's duty when rain was falling, when he held that, though the umpire suspended play before rain had fallen five minutes, it was his duty after rain had fallen five minutes to call the game. He could not see that the rules meant anything else. Well, I submitted the question in reference to Cline, to the CLIPPER, and was sustained. In the CLIPPER of July 2d, under the head of "Another Championship Squabble," he will find that my position on the question of the umpire's duty with reference to the rain, is again sustained. I speak of this to show the good (?) judgment of a man who calls my report a false one. My decision, after mature deliberation, and had he taken the trouble to examine his shirt he would have seen the mud which I pointed out to the gentlemen sitting near me.

I do not claim to be authority on base ball, but I will state this, and back it up, that I am as competent to decide on the rules as any disputed question that I have submitted. I aim to discharge the duties of a correspondent faithfully and impartially, and am pleased to know that to this time my reports have been satisfactory to my employer. Yours truly, H. A. DEMAREST.

CORPUS CHRISTI IN ROME.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

ROME, June 17th, 1870.

We had the privilege of attending the usual grand procession that winds around the colonade of St. Peter's every Corpus Christi morning. This year the celebration of the ceremonies in the Eternal City were more grand and impressive than usual, as all the bishops assembled in Rome from every part of the world took part in them. For days preceding the august ceremonies of Corpus Christi in Rome, we anticipated it with all the eagerness and curiosity that absorb the traveler's mind while he awaits the realization of those earthly grandeurs which he has hitherto but heard or read of with wonder and delight. Between six and seven o'clock on the morning of the festival it rained lightly, and we began to fear a postponement of the procession and all the out-door ceremonies. But a gathering of some dark and suspicious clouds cleared away towards breakfast time, affording us the cheery prospect of being present at the grand procession. It became a pleasant, sunny day, and the beautiful Italian sky was as usual arrayed in all its chaste and serene magnificence.

At an early hour we were wending our eager footsteps to the bridge of St. Angelo, en route for the "Piazza di San Pietro," where the chief attraction of the day was centred. The senators, cardinals, bishops and monsignori turned out in full gaits, and driving through the crowds of gaily dressed Italians and foreigners, they gave an appearance of festivity and grandeur to the streets that lead to the Square of St. Peter's. The pageantry displayed on this, and such occasions, by the ecclesiastical princes and Roman senators is not to be witnessed elsewhere in Europe, and can only be assimilated to the pomp and grandiloseness of certain Oriental dignitaries. The richly mounted and heavy carriages of state, each drawn by a pair of black thoroughbreds, generally complete a cardinal's gala. Three postilions, wearing the respective livery of their master, stand two abreast and one behind on their platform at the back of each carriage. The postilions delight in silk stockings, buckles, shoes and cocked hats. Their coat is a flashy, long tailed one, huge flaps, and in color either blue, green or red, trimmed with gilt lace, to suit the taste of his excellenza. On the front of the carriage sits a coachman in quarter similarly accoutred, with the exception of an additional garment thrown over their shoulders, called a sovrano. The senator, according to his wealth or importance, turns out on the special feast days with two or three magnificent coaches in his train, which are profusely decorated with gilding and brass work and drawn by matched horses brilliantly caparisconed. One of these carriages is occupied by six or eight pages averaging about ten years old. They wear a frock made of silk, an imitation cuirass on the breast and a sword at the side. Their general appearance suggests that they have been especially selected for the prettiness of their faces and their graceful agility. Tights, silk slippers and silver buckles, a three cornered, tucked up hat and white muslin frills encircling the neck and wrists, complete the dress of the Roman senator's page.

Fire years ago by the lines of richly dressed papal Zouaves that are drawn out in front of that great monument of the zeal and charity of Pius IX—the Santo Spirito Hospital—and mingle with the anxious crowds surging through the narrow streets that adjoin the square of St. Peter's, let us rest awhile on the bridge of St. Angelo and watch the incessant windings of the yellow Tibur that seems, in its dismal purling, to re-echo the memory of the past and its olden masters. On it rolls, with time and burdened with its history—rolling on undiminished and unchanged through the live long day, figuring the immortality of its heroes and fame. Contrasted with the still gurgling of the Tibur, the glad bells

"tolling
St. Peter's dome in,
In thunder rolling
From the Vatican,"

arouse the pensive traveler, as he leans over St. Angelo's Bridge to look down upon the classic waters and muse, not only over ages past, but to recall the associations of his happy school days, when the reminiscences of antiquity that now thronged in stern reality around him were familiar by-words. The rolling of the yellow Tibur told in solemn though eloquent silence its great and glorious history. The bells of the Vatican told with unbounded delight,

BASE BALL.

THE FIRST MATCH FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

ATLANTIC OF BROOKLYN vs. MUTUAL OF NEW YORK.

THE ATLANTICS THE VICTORS.

The contests between these old time rival organizations of New York and Brooklyn have always been among the most interesting events of the season, and especially have they possessed a local interest. Formerly they used to attract the attention of the fraternity throughout the country, but within the past year or two the interest in regard to these games has decidedly declined, the reason being that suspicions were last season aroused in regard to the legitimacy of the contests, the general opinion being that an arrangement was winked at which would lead to the playing of three games for gate money. At any rate, in 1868 the crowds at the Atlantic and Mutual matches were to be numbered by the ten thousand; that season scarcely 2,000 paid the entrance fee to the grounds.

These clubs began to play together in 1858—eleven years ago. In their first match, played September 19th, 1858, at Hoboken, the Atlantic nine included Boerum, M. O'Brien, Price, Oliver, Webber, Pearce, P. O'Brien, Archie McMahon and Tice Hamilton. On the Mutual side there were Beard, Powell, Gamgon, A. B. Taylor, Spence, McMahon, Bogart, Bradford and H. B. Taylor. The score was 29 to 20 in favor of the Atlantics. The return match resulted in the success of the Atlantics by a score of 15 to 8. In 1860 the Atlantics again won by scores of 24 to 15 and 26 to 14. In 1861 they were again successful by scores of 22 to 18 and 52 to 27. It was in this match that the Atlantics made 28 in one innings. In 1862 the Atlantics became rather demoralised, and thus year the Mutuals won their first victory over them, the score being 15 to 13. But one game was played, however. In 1863 the return game was played—matches at that time being carried over from one season to another—and this time also the Atlantics were defeated by a score of 27 to 26. It was in this game—played at Bedford, L. I.—that there came near being a row, McKeever playing a waiting game to Al. Smith's pitching. Thus ended the series, the Mutuals thereby winning their first and only match—best two out of three—they ever won with the Atlantics. The same year they again met twice, the Atlantics winning by a score of 15 to 11 and 42 to 18. In 1864, Start, Chapman and Crane joined the Atlantics, and again the uninterrupted career of victory was resumed, for in that season they defeated the Mutuals by scores of 26 to 16 and 21 to 16. In 1865, in their first match at Hoboken, the score stood 13 to 12 only, with the Atlantics ahead, when a storm of rain ended play. The return match, however, was won by a score of 40 to 28. In 1866 the Atlantics won by scores of 34 to 24 and 17 to 15, and in 1867 by scores of 15 to 15 and 32 to 17. In 1868 three games were played, the Atlantics winning the first by a score of 12 to 11. The second was won by the Mutuals, by a score of 25 to 22, and the third by a score of 28 to 17, which gave them the championship. In 1869 the Atlantics won the first game by a score of 2 to 1 in a six innings game; lost the second by a score of 12 to 5, and won the third by a score of 13 to 10. Up to the game of June 28th the total score made by the Atlantics in their twenty-three games with the Mutuals was 530 against 315. The total scores of their eighteen victories were 459 to 208, and the total scores of the five victories by the Mutuals was 107 to 80. The highest scores made in a match by the Atlantics was 52, and the smallest 2. The highest and lowest by the Mutuals were respectively 28 and 1.

The Atlantics played three practice games with the Unions, two with the Harmonics, and one with the Haymakers. The Mutuals had one practice game with the Unions and with the Rose Hills.

The weather on Tuesday, June 28th, the date of the first match this season between these clubs, was extremely hot, and the two or three thousand who were present at the match took things very easy, sitting in their shirt sleeves, with handkerchiefs on their heads; in fact, in every way that afforded them relief from the heat. There was but little betting on the result, the wagers being chiefly on the runs scored each innings. Both parties were apparently in good trim, and the two clubs were strongly represented. The Atlantics had out their Red Stocking match nine, but the Mutuals did not have either Flanly or Martin in theirs, Flanly having given up professional ball play, while Martin was regarded as useless against the Atlantics, and in the veteran McMahon went in for him, Swandell playing at second base in Flanly's place.

THE GAME.

The Atlantics having lost the toss, sent Pearce to the bat, who opened with a safe hit, and, as the next four strikers batted the lively "Peck 'bounding rock'" ball for bases, the result was a score of 3 before a hand was put out, and, before the innings terminated, another run was added. On the Mutual side the retirement was in one, two, three order, thereby giving the Atlantics the benefit of a start off with 4 to 0. In the second innings the Atlantics earned a single, but scored 2, and but for a muff of Pike's they would have again whitewashed the New Yorkers; as it was, the latter scored one run. In the third innings the Atlantics again punished Wolters for 3 runs, Mac. thanking the Mutuals, took a lead in the game by the decisive figures of 9 to 1. At this stage of the game it looked as if the Brooklyn players were going to have a soft thing of it, and the odds in the betting market, of course, felt the effects of the play. The Mutuals, however, gave no evidence of weakness this season with just such a bad look against them, did not trouble themselves much about it, and, seeing that the Atlantics began to feel over confident, they went in for a rally, and by some sharp fielding in the 4th and 5th innings they whitewashed their opponents, and, getting them a little demoralized in their fielding, added three runs to their score, thus leaving the totals at 9 to 4.

In the sixth and seventh innings the Mutuals again did some extra fielding, by which they disposed of the Atlantics for a single, and, adding no less than eight runs to their own score, they took the lead in the game by the tally of 12 to 4. It was now that the heat was forgotten and that the crowd began to wake up to the fact that there was likely to be some excitement in the contest after all; and especially were the movements of the players watched with eagerness as the signs of an approaching storm began to rapidly manifest themselves. Dark clouds gathering in the west threatening to stop play every innings. Ferguson now went to the bat for the Atlantics in the ninth innings and by a good hit he earned his base; Zetliein followed with a good one and made his base, but by Hall's poor hit he was forced out at second. By Swandell's bad throw Ferguson got in and Hall reached his third, and another muff by Swandell giving a life to Pike, let in Hall, thereby being the score. Afterwards Pearce came to the rescue with a fine hit, and before the innings closed the Atlantics had scored 8, after giving chances for a whitewash. The Mutuals then went to the bat to get three runs to win, but they were disposed of for a single and the game ended with the victory in the Atlantics' hands by the totals of 15 to 13. Below is the full score:—

HARVARD vs. LOWELL.

The return game between the above-named Boston clubs was played at the Union grounds, Roxbury district, on the 27th ult. The weather being pleasant, a goodly number of spectators were on hand. The game was one-sided, contrary to the general expectation, and the College boys won easily by a score of 36 to 12. Goodwin and Reynolds were off for this game, Barnes and Smith supplying their places. The Lowells played a poor game, several players seeming to take little or no interest in their positions. Rogers did well at 1st base, as he does everywhere, and made a very pretty double play in the 4th innings, as follows:—Eustis hit hard to Reed, who fielded the ball well to "Mort," who promptly, but too hastily, threw to 2d base, "Fitch" jumped and took it with one hand, the crowd yelled, and Thorpe, thinking it muffed, turned to see where it went to, in so doing leaving his base and being touched out. The Harvards played so-so. Bush led at the bat in grand style. Newton sprained his ankle in the 5th innings, Bethley playing at r. f. The story is told by the score:—

RESOLUTE vs. ECKFORD.

The Eckford Club, of Brooklyn, visited the Waverly Fair grounds on June 29th to play their return game with the Resolutes, of Elizabeth. They unwisely went over to Jersey short handed, a bad thing for any club to do, but especially so when they go to meet the Resolutes, who are a Club not to be trifled with by even the strongest nines. The weather was hot, and that, probably, prevented a full turn out of players. At any rate the Ecklords could only number six of their nine. At the ferry they met their old pitcher, Sprague, who made a scrub, and with two other subs. they crossed the river and took train for Waverly. There they found the Resolutes ready to meet them, and, though they did not have Greathead, their short stop, they had a good man in his place in Lang, and, with an amateur sub. at right field, they went to work. The game soon became one sided and uninteresting, the fine play of the Resolutes in the field and the way they batted the lively ball giving them an advantage from the start. The Eckfords muffed fearfully, wild throwing and dropped fly balls being frequent, while the pitching was what the boys would call "the worst you ever seen." We viewed the contest from the shaded seats of the grand stand, choosing the pleasant surroundings of the lady spectators, who sat watching the game with eager interest. There were two parties of the fair ones, one party being evidently thoroughly posted in the game, and their just criticisms of the lax observance of the rules shown by Wolters would have instructed that player in something he is apparently ignorant of. The last innings closed with a well earned victory for the Resolutes, who punished McDermott in the first five innings for nine runs, though they did not earn a run off Sprague's pitching in the last four innings. M. Campbell's first base play was a feature of the Resolute fielding, Lang and Ritter playing the best in the in-field in the way of assistance. James Snyder fielded the best on the other side. TOUR OF THE "WHITE STOCKINGS."

CHICAGO vs. ECKFORD, OF SYRACUSE.

The "White Stockings" made their entree into Syracuse, N. Y., on the 25th ult., and in the afternoon were pitted against the Eckfords. Only six innings could be played, in consequence of the visitors being compelled to leave for Troy by the 7 o'clock train, to fulfil their engagement with the "Haymakers," of Lansingburgh, at which time the score stood as below:—

CHICAGO vs. UNION, OF LANSINGBURGH.

A large throng gathered at Troy on the afternoon of the 27th to witness the contest between the members from the Garden City and the team of Lansingburgh. The game was called at 3:45 P. M., and, while the sun shines. Concerning the play in this encounter we clip the subjoined remarks from the Troy Times of the day following:—

The play of the "White Stockings" was in every way inferior to that of the "Haymakers," who lost the game on the ninth innings by a mere accident. Dick was on second base and McMullen hit to right field, and Cuthbert after a long run and a tumble and roll, came up with the ball in one hand. No one supposed it had been taken. Dick started to third, when the ball was fielded to second and both McMullen and Dick were declared out, closing the innings for the "Haymakers." But for this Dick would almost certainly have got home and closed the game on the ninth innings; instead of which it was tied at this point, and the tenth innings going adverse-ly to the "Haymakers," the "White Stockings" won the match. Craver caught nicely, as he always does, behind the bat, but he had more passed balls than Allister, the "Haymaker" catcher, and his heavy fly batting was just what the "Haymaker" fielders relished. Meyerle and Pinkham, the two pitchers, were off and ineffective, and, properly called down by the umpire, would have lost the game. Hodes, short stop, muffed repeatedly. Clipper Flynn played admirably in the field and at the bat, and Mart King also showed his old strength in both places. The others simply did fairly—nothing more. The Chicago club cannot, in our judgment, beat either the Athletic, of Philadelphia, the Atlantics, of Brooklyn, the "Red Stockings," or the present nine of the "Haymakers," in a game properly umpired, which the one of yesterday was not.

The Haymaker nine had just been re-organized, and had never played together before, while the positions of some of them had been changed. As a whole, their play was superior to their old series, their batting being safer and their fielding better. McMullen pitched during the first eight innings, Fisher playing second base, and although a little wild in the beginning, his balls were subsequently well delivered and effective. In the last two innings he played second base, and played it superbly, making two magnificent catches. Allister proved himself a perfect wonder behind the bat. Bellan, on third base and with the willow, developed unconscious strength. Yorke and Foran were both good in the field, but had not their usual luck at the bat. Flowers played short stop nicely. Wolverton played at first until the last half of the fourth innings, when he was disabled by a ball thrown to him by McMullen, which struck him upon the thumb of the left hand, breaking it and forcing the bones through the flesh. He had done magnificently well, making the only home run in the game, and the accident was deeply regretted. Dr. McLean set the thumb temporarily, and Dick was substituted in Wolverton's place. His play was also good. The score:—

CHICAGO vs. LOWELL.

On Tuesday, 28th ult., the Chicago nine arrived at Boston, very much behind time, and after a hard night's ride, without sleep, they encountered the Lowell team on the Union grounds. The game, up to the sixth innings, was very hotly contested, the score then standing 14 to 13; but in the last four "stages" the "Whites" batted heavily for 29 runs, to the Lowells 12. Of the visiting nine, considering their tired condition, much can be said in praise. Several pretty individual plays were made. Wood, at second, made a splendid catch, hot from the bat of Briggs; Cuthbert made several good fly catches, with the sun in his eyes; Craver went to the centre field and King behind, on account of the former's fingers being injured. Of the Lowells, Bradbury showed some beautiful catching, and did the best batting on either side. It was a day of accidents; Reed, in stopping a line ball of Craver, had his hand badly "bunged up," and Geyer, going to right field, did wonders, making two good catches. Jewell was on his play, and did good service. Briggs, valuable, and generally a sure fielder of the Ls was a little unlucky in his fielding. "Anderson" was back in his old position and performed well his part. The score:—

CHICAGO vs. TRI-MOUNTAIN.

The Chicago Club played their second game in the Hub, June 29th, their opponents being the Tri-Mountains. The ground was rather soft, a heavy shower occurring during the night. Flynn played short-stop quite well, and Wood did the same at second. At left field Treacy was effective, making several very pretty catches. For the Bostonians, Kelly and Sanderson made handsome flies, the former three and the latter two. The T. M.'s made thirteen fly catches to about a dozen by the "Whites." Flagg made one fine foul, disposing of Craver. Barrows did the best batting for the T. M.'s, and Treacy for the Chicago. Wood batted well for a fine home run in the eighth innings. Mr. Wells, of the Harvards, umpired the game in a satisfactory manner. The score:—

COLLEGE CONTESTS.

YALE vs. HARVARD.

On the 27th the Freshmen nines of Yale and Harvard met at Springfield on the ball field and had their first contest together this season, the success of the Yale boys, who played under disadvantageous circumstances, inasmuch as they not only were minus the services of their captain, Elder, but lost their catcher's services, Bently being injured by a ball "in the eye-ball bim" in the sixth innings. The following is the score:—

Umpire—Shaw, of the Mutuals, of Springfield. Scorers—Yale, Frank W. Howard; Harvard, G. H. Johnson.

The result was greeted with wild excitement by the Yale men, and the successful players were carried away from the field upon the shoulders of the men. The Yale men returned in the steamboat train, well satisfied with the trip.

TOUR OF THE "RED STOCKINGS."

THEY DEFEAT THE OLYMPICS OF WASHINGTON.

The Cincinnati club invaded Washington, D. C., on the evening of June 26th, and were met at the depot by Major Hoyt and a delegation from the Olympics, who escorted them to the St. James Hotel, where apartments had been provided for them. On the following afternoon they were opposed to the Olympic club on the new ground of that organization. About three thousand persons were present, the day being the hottest of the season. Game was called about 4 P. M., with the "Red Stockings" at the bat, but they were quickly disposed of without scoring. Up to the end of the fifth innings the game was close and hotly contested, the Olympics having the lead; but in the sixth innings the "Reds" seemed to get the range of Leech, who was considerably overcome by the extreme heat, and, aided by muffing of the out-field, regained the lead, which they retained until the close of the game, which was called at the end of the eighth innings by mutual consent. Score:

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, July 4th, 1870.

THIS DAY, ninety-four years ago, some of us had not even been thought of; and others, who lived and had a being at that important epoch in our national history, have long since "gone where the woodbine twineth," never, alas, to return to this vale of useless tears and fruitless exertions. There have been many changes since the spirit of '76, me boys, first manifested itself in the colonies, and gave evidence of that theocratical determination which has to this day preserved us a nation. When the proud American eagle first flapped its wide spreading pinions o'er the declaration of independence; when the state house bell—now cracked—gave forth its patriotic tones, and announced "the people are free, the people are free;" when King George trembled in his boots as the Atlantic cable flashed the news to him that articles of agreement had been signed, and that the fight was certain to come off, barring magisterial interference; when the proud hierarchy that invented the American flag flung its folds to the welcome breeze, and bade it float forever as a standard sheet; when [The boss has just gone out for another drop—I hain't never seen him take so many brandy sawyers as he is adoin this butiful 4 therjuly; he's been a shoutin and agoin on just as if he felt like a mornin' star, probly; if he hain't more 'n'eerful 'm 'fleared I'd have to finish this here, which I don feel like doin' without extry wages. Ah, he comes, as they says in the play.—OUR JIM.] But again, let the legitimate drama be well understood, let the how obdurate public be trained up to its high standard of idealistic beatitudes, and the habituas of the old Park pit will not have lived in vain. We have nothing to say antagonistic to the burlesque element—on the contrary, we rejoice at the advent of the British blondes, because it shows that our little rupture with the mother country has developed a nation and a peoples which, otherwise, might have been a wilderness and hewers of wood and drawers of beer. So, we say, let them come as the waves come when navies are stranded, for Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm on the Indian reservation, if not already occupied. Freedom is the keynote of our national pride and greatness; independence, the lever by which we move the world, and money is king with our rulers. When Mr. Pilgrim Joonior, stood on the burning deck of the Plymouth Rock and surveyed the smiling faces of the multitude gathered around him through his liberality on that fiery Sabbath day, when he took 'em to Po'keepsie, did not his cheek tinge with a pardonable vanity, and his gait assume a dignified bearing which other theatrical managers, who have no Plymouth Rock, or Erie Railroads to their backing, have seen livin' men—[He's gone to take a little wine for his stummick's sake, and the printers is a swarin' like hell coss they have to work on the 4th, wich isn't rite by a dam site, I bleeve, as I'm in the same bote. I don't keer ware yu pick 'em up, no son of this here sod of liberty don't want to work if he kin help it, and that's a helthy old trooth. To save time I'll finish what the boss' illness has left without a tale end onto it. See he:—We hev sene lying men goin around with side shose and wax figgers a jerkin' in a mity good stake at ten cents a pop wen the sho was the damdist frord ever kinnived at by wirchuse pepil. There was no Bingim, a shower of the first water, who wud stand in frunt of a panoful of hanfuls, and work in, ladies and gentis; ori wot yu see on that there is in here, ony ten cents. Stan back, littal boy, and let the crowd pass in" and may be there wuddent be a sine of a crowd no wares nere. And then, if he did git a fu pepil in, fore they'd seen anything he'd shout:—"The exhibishins over, ladies and gents, clere the canvis, and illow others to cum in." I hate the hole consarn, anyhow, wich I wonzt tuch a doase unbeknownst to meself, thinkin it wus sumthin' soothin', wich I sune found out it wus the uther way. The boss returns from his revel—I will hide behind yon frenly cheer.—OUR JIM.] How beautiful the day, how peaceful the happy hearts now twining round this great tree of liberty, whose branches outstretch from pole to pole, and clasp the world within their luxurious foliage.

Oh, sweet is the sound of old Trinity's chime
As the bell of each depot is tolled;
We welcome the fettered of every clime,
To a nation of silver and gold;
We hallow the day that gave to this land
The sculptured——

[I like to see a man drink when he's dri, but it's pison to be obleged to see him go out so orften by hisself, as yu air aware; besides, in the absints of him, how's the dam paper to be got out, I'd like to no; how's anybody to no what he wants to say when he loves a line half ended, like that there? I like a drink as well's the next man, but I hate to see fokes make beasts of 'emselves, yer better bleeve; there haint no shinnanigin about me, I want yer to no. I spose I must go on with his stuf:—

We hallow the day that gave to this land
The sculptured—outlines of a bere jug.
By logger weel live and by logger weel stand,
For much I've put into this here mug.

Wen the Peenyun rade on Canady was made,
Hoom was it that slept all the blite?
Believe me or not, 'twas a American scout,
And his presents sent all of 'em kitin'.

For 4th is a day, as I've heard 'em say,
For general fun and injoyment;
Furvidin' yure pockits kin't ketch hold of all rocktits,
And yourself isn't out of employment.

Tru curridg cums not when the daze warry hot,
And the lites—

"He returneth like a theef in the nits, and he looks putty full. He let him finish out my muse."—OUR JIM.]

Tru curridg cums not when the daze warry hot,
And the lites—of a nation are burning
On love's holy altar, where hearts never falter,
When virtue to courage is thrining.

Then calm be the waves that over us roll,
And palsied the hand that would harm us;
'Tis the sweet consolation when ballots we poll,
We feel that no foe can alarm us.

As we gaze upon the azure of the great canopy above, and behold the stars and stripes of the American standard flying in bold relief athwart the etherial blue in the boundless expanse of space—as we listen to the booming of the artillery, which heralds the presence of another natal anniversary—as we hear the sharp rattling of the drum and the shrill shrieks of the ear-piercing fife, our heart goes out towards the bondmen of less happier climes than our own, and we yearn to break the yoke that holds them in thrall, and deliver them from the vassalage that keeps them beneath the iron heel of despotism. The noon-day sun, which penetrates the abodes alike of prince and peasant, is a bright harbinger of a happy future; though its beams circle o'er the various conditions of estates, yet over and anon its regal health of light and hope and trust reveals to the overburthened a ray of joy that no earthly influence can create or intensify. "Jim—ny, I'm going out to purchase some fireworks for you, and may be back very soon." "Yer betterent git any more fireworks to-day, I think; better wait to the paper's gone to press, if I knows nothin' about it." "And if I am not back in half an hour you can grind out some of your jokes to fill up with, and tell the compositors to stop when they get through, and go forth and enjoy the day." [That there's the last I'll hev for this day, good enuf; he's "on it" to-day, that's a shure pop. It's a good thing that the 4th dussent cum orften. Well, I spose I must get throo this lite wasted job jist as kwick as wink, so as to let the innereent compositers git their firewurks.—OUR JIM.]

THE LORST THRED TAK'N UP BY "OUR JIM."

This here is a da of ——edum of speche and libberty of the pres thruout ——e world, I gess, and I'me goin' to put my pry in of it brake my jowl. Of ort dase, giv me nu yeres, for then yer doo have libberty, and kin doo jist as yu dam plese, beggin yure parding for obscenity of languidg, for then it is that pepils houses is throne opun like the wind, and yu kin ete and drink til yu bust, if yu want tu, and it don't cost yu a red. Wi ive knone guris to send out tu hunt up chaps tu make calls on tu 'em, so as to fil up a long list of names of freins and visiters; wine flose frely like water, and yu kin go hevy or lite, jist as yure ravenius stummick sankers after it; a man kin git tite a dozzen times nu yeres without a sent into his lohesum pockit. Now yu kant doo nun of that there onto the 4th, as yu ma observ, wich is wun reezin wy sum of us prefer tu wurk the 4th rathern nu yeres. I think if nu yeres cud be changed to 4th and tetee tooras, it mite take better, for I don't bleeve in gittin a grovil to see firewurx let orf I don't bleeve in gittin a grovil to see firewurx let orf when it's as hot as hel without no firewurx, that's what I think of that; besides, if nu yeres cum the 4th everybody wood drink more, bein more dryer than in cold wether. If the bored of publik wurx, of wich our grate sachem is the chefe, makes this here change wile they've got their hands in, I bleve the wurks wood gane the sympers of a dredful sorted hopi, and the publik wood wax fat. Hem this inel'ys do'ye, as the bone's french wurx says. .....Talkin about drama, I hare that the drammer is in a state of thaits to, as it were; and manigers faces don't wear that benine especk wich bonfil critticks put on to em in the presens. I canst se wares the use in playin such infernal hot weather as we injoyed last weke. Why the actors and actresses dident go and git a lot of ice, and hev it broke fine, and pregde round the stage like they had a bad collick. I think Mr. Burg, hoom is a frend to the humin race, ort to take these pepil in hand, and purvent needeless further croolty, and that's what I think about that, and I dont care a dam who nose it.....Sam Colwill has just brung us a troop of French rasslers, hoom is rasslin this week at the Museem; it must be hot work this time of yere. I find it much laber to rassel with the befestake my landlady gives me in lu of the price of me bored; but that may be the forit of the stake, wich is mity tuf, I warnt yu to no, by the by, in a manner speakin I hope the rasslers ma hav a fare field, and ma the best man win, without playin litle for the gate manney, as our bass boll chaps wood cunningly put it. If the Frenshmen base boll chaps wood cunningly put it. If the Frenshmen are on the skware, we hope the rasslers wont thro off, wich is a fudy spree, as the boss's greke without no master calls it.....Mi poettick mashene has got a slite impediment into sum of her cogs, I think, by the wa she grines out English wurses lately; so I got a blacksmith to put a Dutch valv into her, and she now gives the broken Dutch rimes like she was orfwase brort up to it, as yu ma hav sene by the artikle in this department, wich the boss ses is rit by his Dutch fisin and runnin reporter, which he hassent got enny, but wich is orl ground out by the ade of the nu valv. And talkin about 4th, lie wind up with a pome wich the boss ma put it into his pipe and smoke it, as ime alive. Ile fust gresse her with a little Brewurx, giv her her hed, and put her

City Summary.

THE PAST SEASON AND THE FUTURE.—We are now in what may be termed the intermediate state, a period of inactivity for those who patronize amusements, but of vast importance to the professional, for it is during this apparent lull in theatricals that managers and performers are busy in making engagements and preparing for the time to come. The season just closed cannot be looked upon as a successful one for managers in general, although some of them have done pretty well, and we now see a disposition on the part of managers to take in sail and prepare for a squall. For a year or two past there has been a sort of cut-throat rivalry between certain managers to obtain performers of merit at any cost. This has been the case particularly with a number of variety theatre managers, and to such an extent has the war been carried, that the most fabulous salaries have been paid to performers by one employer to induce them to break their contracts with another. Variety performers who had been getting from thirty to fifty dollars per week, and thought themselves well paid at that, suddenly found themselves a bone of contention between managers, and from fifty the salaries ran up to sixty, seventy and so on, as the managerial war grew fiercer, until the sum reached as high as one hundred and fifty and two hundred dollars for a single performer. Song and dance men who were content with thirty and forty dollars a week each, before last season closed were getting one hundred and twenty-five to one hundred and fifty dollars each per week. We know two pantomimists who were being paid not long ago from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five each per week; before the close of last season each of them was offered five hundred dollars, and the other two hundred and fifty dollars per week. Good looking dancing girls and singers who used to look with longing for a chance to dance and sing for thirty dollars weekly became the recipients of one hundred to two hundred dollars each per week, "according to quality." The most extravagant salaries were paid for mediocre talent, providing the performer was popular and could "bring down the house," or, if girls, was possessed of a pretty face, good form and well-turned leg. One Ethiopian comedian, who, when regularly engaged with a minstrel troupe, on the end, was receiving a salary of forty dollars per week, has been "starring it" with variety troupes this summer at a salary of two hundred and fifty dollars weekly, and traveling expenses. This we have from the gentleman himself, who assures us that it is really the truth. Well, we believe in a performer getting all he can for his services, but such a sudden upward tendency, we felt convinced, was only an artificial inflation and could not last. We knew that managers could not pay such salaries and live, and once the managers came to grief, then down would go the rates to what they were before. So bitter was the feud between two Boston variety managers that they would offer almost any price to get people away from the other. One engaged the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, for a summer season, to commence in June. Thereupon, the opposition manager engaged the Chestnut Street Theatre, same city, and to circumvent the other, got together a really excellent company, and opened in May, and on the opening week he had crowded houses. He remained there four weeks, and when he came to foot up the receipts and expenditures, it was discovered that he had lost in those four weeks just five thousand dollars. The other, who had engaged the Arch for four weeks, tried to get out of the contract, but he was held to his bargain, so he opened on the 20th of June, during a hot spell, played to slim houses until Wednesday, 29th, and then gave up the ghost. How much he lost we have not yet ascertained—something among the thousands, no doubt. This temporary inflation of prices has had another injurious effect, which is now beginning to tell upon the profession at large. In England, salaries are small compared with what they are here, even without any inflation. When performers in England learned of the high salaries being paid here for even ordinary talent, numbers of them made up their minds to visit America, and now the market is overrun with both native and foreign talent; somebody must go to the wall; and now we find that managers, seeing the theatrical market so glutted, have determined to cut down salaries to a very low figure in every department; some good leading men, even, being obliged to take engagements at a reduction of one third to one half of their former salaries, or run the risk of remaining idle the whole season. Utility people are engaging, in some instances, at as low a figure as ten and twelve dollars per week, and good low comedians are signing articles for twenty-five and thirty-dollars weekly, where, formerly, they could command fifty and seventy-five. And thus the innocent performer is made to suffer from the cut-throat rivalry of managers, whose wild speculations in artists have been the means of making the supply much greater than the demand. Another effect has been to entirely shut up and destroy the establishments of certain of these rival managers, just because the salaries paid would not warrant them in remaining open, more money being paid out than was taken in, and now there are just so many places less for performers to find employment in. Whole troupes were brought here from abroad by speculators—some of the people possessing certain degree of talent, others were of but little account. The cut-throat managers, by liberal promises, enticed away the pick of the companies, the troupes thereby being broken up, and the balance left to shift for themselves among strangers as best they could; some of them became disgusted, and those who could do so, returned to the places from whence they came; others, without means or friends, had to take hold of whatever offered, and in some cases the offers were ruinous in every sense. The result of it all is that managers hold the winning hand, and can now dictate their own terms. Many who will not engage in the stock at low rates will form combinations, and travel during the coming season, which ought to be good for the proprietors of halls, which are now springing up everywhere, with all the necessary scenery and conveniences for peripatetic dramatic and musical forces. What the approaching season will be it is hard to foretell. We see no good reason, however, to anticipate the bad business which the economising policy of certain managers would seem to indicate. What the people want are good performances, well played and well mounted; they will patronize novelty in every branch of amusements, provided there is really something novel in that "novelty." We can scarcely look for extraordinary long runs next season, although good representations will bear repetition for some weeks. Burlesque, with plenty of legs and plump forms, will not fail for want of patronage, as has been predicted. That element in our amusements is not so easily wiped out. What is called the "legitimate drama" is quiet. That it will assert its supremacy over all other forms of theatrical entertainments is not a safe bet.

THE PAST WEEK'S business at our theatres was about the poorest that has been known here for years. The weather was so oppressively hot that people had not the least desire to sit out a play, and the result was that in some houses the curtain went up to sixty and seventy people, which were added to slightly later in the evening. People could not be clubbed into a theatre when the thermometer seemed to have taken a decided stand at 90 after sundown. It was fearful upon the performers, too, the exertions they were required to make in the performance of their parts causing the perspiration to flow from them in streams, injuring, and in some instances ruining the costumes worn. Several managers have been compelled to knock under and close the season, the houses remaining open after to-night, July 4th, being the Grand Opera House in Boston, Wallack's, Theatre Comique, Tony Pastor's, Old Bowery, Kelly & Leon's, and Fifth Avenue. The latter will close on the 9th.

W. HENRY RICE left this city, per steamship Denmark, for London, Eng., on the 2d inst. He goes to join the Christy Minstrels at St. James' Hall.

"FERNANDE," which has been struggling through the heated term with considerable fortitude, will be withdrawn from the boards of the Fifth Avenue Theatre on Saturday, July 9th, which will close the season. Mrs. G. H. Gilbert received a "benefit" in name, on the 30th, but the evening was really too oppressive to be of benefit to any but ice cream dealers and cooling beverage dispensers.

FANNY PRESTON is at present in this city. She has been quite sick for some time at her residence in Rochester, N. Y., but is now convalescent.

PROF. TANNER, with his performing dogs and monkeys, is in town.

BOOTH'S THEATRE re-opens for the regular season on August 15th, with Joseph Jefferson as the attraction, in "Rip Van Winkle."

ALTHOUGH it was announced that Mr. Fox of Philadelphia had purchased considerable of the Tammany fixings, we now learn that Mr. M. Canning, manager of the Opera House, Pittsburgh, Pa., has purchased all the chairs in the orchestra, as well as the other seats of the house, also the entire scenery and properties of the Tammany. The purchase was made on June 29th. Mr. Canning paid $2,——— for what cost Messrs. Palmer and Jarrett about $17,000. They are to be used in the new Opera House now being erected in Pittsburgh.

MR. FRED MAINDER is busily engaged writing a new play for little Nell, at present the star at Wood's Museum.

MR. CHARLES WYNDHAM left for England on the 2d inst. He returns late in August to start with his dramatic company, and produce "The Lancers" throughout the west and south, considerable of his starring time having already been filled.

THE FERNANDE DRAMATIC COMPANY that went from here two weeks ago for a traveling tour, returned to this city on the 1st inst., business having proved so bad that the party were compelled to throw up several towns and the return from Albany before the week closed.

SAMUEL COLVILLE arrived in town from England, by the City of Paris, June 27th. An account of the novelties he has engaged will be found in another column.

FELIX VINCENT was engaged to accompany the Lydia Thompson troupe to California, but when he ascertained that he would be required to play Amina in "La Somnambula," and Minerva in "Ixion," he sought and obtained a release from the engagement rather than appear in female characters.

THE DRAMATIC AGENCY for Col. T. A. Brown has a number of business cards in another part of this issue of the CLIPPER, touching various matters of interest to the profession, and to which we refer the reader's attention.

LOWELL & SIMMONDS, dramatic agents, 636 Broadway, will be found in another column, and we refer those in want of talent to their advertisement.

THE TAMMANY, we are told, is to be fitted up as an armory, having been rented to the state.

"MINNIE'S LUCK" and Miss Lucia Cavendish simultaneously made their first appearance at Wallack's Theatre on Monday evening, June 27th, through the courtesy of that witty and genial artist and author, Mr. John Brougham, to whose facile pen the play owes its paternity. The play is in five acts and was produced with the following cast:—

Lawyer Goodwin	C. Fisher
Melchesedek Maggs	J. H. Stoddart
Philip Wrexford	C. W. Barry
Barney O'Flynn	Joseph Nolan
Inky Dick	Miss Lizzie Price
Corney Ryan	J. W. Lingard
Minnie Rook	Leona Cavender
Horatio Fryer	John Brougham
Mike Mulligan	Mr. Quigley
Dinah Doolin	Mr. Blakeman
Bart. Halligan	Mr. Jomas
Mat Maguire	Mr. Williams
Hans Wagleman	Mr. Gambrine
Matthew	Mr. Peck
Patrick	Mr. Curran
Mrs. Horatio Fryer	Annie Deland
Mrs. Willoughby	Emily Mestayer
Cleopatra	Marian Mordaunt
The Kitten	Miss Rowe
Jane	Miss Hayden
Bridget	Miss Howe

and, as a whole, was well acted. The scene is local to New York, and the plot may be sketched as follows:—Clara Willoughby, known as Minnie Rook, is the daughter of Mrs. Willoughby, who, having obtained a divorce from a second husband, is entrusted with the care of the child. Instigated by feelings of revenge against the mother, this second husband, who assumed the name of Philip Wrexford, succeeds in abducting the child, intending to bring her up in a life of crime, and, when she has become sufficiently degraded, to send her back to her mother. Minnie is first introduced to us as a street singer, who is compelled to return nightly to Wrexford with a definite amount of money, or receive at his hands a cruel beating. During her wanderings about the city she has formed a friendship with one of the street gamins, named Inky Dick, who shares with her his food, and accords her protection in various ways. Mingling, shivering with cold, comes in to a corner grocery, where a political primary election is being held, and by her quiet demeanor and pretty face wins the sympathy of the proprietor, who allows her to play the banjo and sing a song or two, and in person takes up a collection for her. Overpowered with such generosity, she relates the pitiful story of Wrexford's treatment of herself, and the proprietor informs her that any night she may find herself short of the amount which Wrexford's cupidity demands to come to him and he will supply the deficiency. Horatio Fryer, the sensational "literary wist," having in the meantime entered and heard the recital of her wrongs, writes up a sensation report for a morning paper, describing her as the scion of a noble house, earning her bread by street singing. Melchesedeck Maggs, a species of Fagin, who keeps a horde of juvenile thieves of either sex, and lives upon the profits of their crime, attempts to forcibly abduct Minnie, who is gallantly rescued by Inky Dick, who attacks Maggs with a hot poker he has snatched from the stove. We next find Minnie comfortably domiciled at the house of Fryer, who has brought her hither and adopted her. Wrexford, having read Fryer's sensational report, and fearing in consequence the failure of his nefarious scheme, seeks out Maggs—over whom he holds complete control by possession of a forged note for one thousand dollars—and orders him to gain possession of the child, train her to theft and secure her conviction, for the accomplishment of which he promises to deliver up to him the forged paper. Maggs, in the disguise of a lady and claiming to be the mother of Minnie, gains access to Fryer's house during his absence. Fryer's suspicions being aroused by his outre manners, he boldly throws off the mask, presents a pistol at the head of Mrs. Fryer, and forcibly carries off Minnie to his own lodgings, where, on arriving, he orders his companion, Cleopatra, a negress, to strip from Minnie her costly attire, and, after clothing her in rags, to tie her to the bedpost and whip her. Cleopatra, who was formerly Minnie's nurse, and had been discharged by Mrs. Willoughby for supposed complicity in Minnie's first abduction, recognises and discovers herself to her. During Maggs' temporary absence, while changing his attire, Minnie's costume being changed, she is strapped to the bed post, and although the other children plead in piteous tones that Minnie may be spared, Maggs is inexorable, and orders Cleopatra to flog her, which she seemingly affects to do. At this instant the door is burst open, and Fryer and Inky Dick enter, who, after speedily releasing Minnie, tie Maggs in the same position, and administer to him a sound punishment, all the children assisting by throwing missiles. We are now introduced to the office of Lawyer Goodwin, where we find Mrs. Willoughby, who has come to seek tidings of her lost child, Goodwin having been earnestly engaged in attempting to discover the whereabouts ever since her disappearance. He informs the heart-broken mother that he is, as yet, unsuccessful, when Mr. Fryer is announced. Mrs. Willoughby retires to an adjoining apartment during the interview. Fryer announces his success, and that Minnie is outside in a carriage. Mrs. Willoughby is recalled, and soon enfolds to her heart her daughter. Minnie is now installed in her own home, and Cleopatra, her nurse, is forgiven and retained. Inky Dick now seeks and gains an interview with Minnie; the friendship of their early days has ripened into mutual love, but he now sees a gulf immeasurable between them, and talks of parting, of seeking out a name and fortune in the west, to which Minnie reluctantly assents, and promises to wait for him. Dick has a pleasant surprise in store for Minnie, by presenting to her the banjo she played when they first met, and which offers an excuse for the introduction of a song. The banjo is finally presented to Minnie to play, who leaves just as Mrs. Willoughby is returning. We are now transferred to Maggs' lodgings, and find that he has instructed one of his keenest pupils to call herself Minnie Rook; and as he peruses the morning paper he finds, to his great joy, that she has been convicted and sentenced to five years' imprisonment for pocket picking. Wrexford enters, and Maggs, showing him the proof of the accomplishment of his part of the contract, demands the return of the forged note, to which Wrexford, after considerable hesitation, consents, and the paper being destroyed, Maggs is once more a free man. We now enter the mansion of Lawyer Goodwin, where we find Fryer and his host discussing the merits of Inky Dick over their post prandial cigars and sherry. Fryer is quite enthusiastic in the adulation of Dick's manly and noble qualities, and in the conversation a clue is discovered to his identity, and Goodwin informs him that he is the son of and the only heir to the fortune left by the hanging of a lady for whom in early life he had dearly loved, and who is now deceased, resolves to adopt him as his own son, and dispatches Fryer in haste to find him. The scene changes to the mansion of Mrs. Willoughby, where a ball is in progress in honor of Minnie's natal day. When the festivities are at their height Wrexford is announced and the interview which follows is very brief. Wrexford is thoroughly at last takes place; he announces in the highest spirits the hour of his triumph, and proclaims in the presence of the assembled guests that her daughter is a convicted felon. Judge of his surprise when Fryer suddenly calls in Maggs to refute the assertion, and how completely he is vanquished when Minnie herself enters the apartment. Young Mr. Goodwin is now introduced in fashionable attire, and Minnie, not recognizing Dick under this costume, is inclined to treat him cavalierly, but, in accordance with the behests of her mother, turns to welcome him, when she discovers her heart's idol. Mrs. Willoughby, at the solicitation of Goodwin and Fryer, finally consents to the marriage of the young couple in future years, should they then entertain the same regard for each other, and the curtain falls upon a happy tableau, with the usual concomitants of virtue rewarded and vice punished. Miss Cavender has a part well suited to her abilities, and pleased the audience. There are touches both of nature and of art in her impersonation of the heroine which speak loudly of future success when she has more practice in the mellowing and ripening her artistic qualities. Mr. John Brougham, as the metropolitan newspaper man, was perfectly at home and kept the audience in excellent spirits by his efforts to manufacture sensation articles and his constant sallies of wit. To Miss Lizzie Price, for her artistic performance of Inky Dick, must be awarded the highest praise. She blends most happily the qualities of mirth and pathos, and the performance was a very even one, and, to nature, with no exaggeration or straining after effect. Mr. Stoddart's make up of Maggs was almost perfect and he enacted the part in that quiet, natural and artistic style for which he is justly celebrated. Mrs. Mordaunt's natural and vigorous assumption of the negro nurse is worthy of high commendation. Mr. Fisher, to whose lot, during the summer season, all the heavy villains generally fall, performed with unfulness and efficiency the character of the honest lawyer, while Mr. Barry made all of Wrexford that such an up-hill part was capable of, while Miss Emily Mestayer and Miss Annie Deland, who had very little to do beyond the portrayal of maternal love, did that little satisfactorily. "Minnie's Luck" may be pronounced a success, and will no doubt hold possession of the boards until J. K. Emmett appears on July 11th. The attendance, owing to the heat, was light throughout the week.

THE OLYMPIC closes its season on Monday, July 4th, of which we present the following resume:—The theatre did not close during the preceding summer, Mr. G. L. Fox appearing in the pantomimes of "Humpty Dumpty" and "Hickory Dicory Dock." The regular fall and winter season commenced September 6th, with the following dramatic company:—G. L. Fox, E. F. Mortimer, J. B. Studley, George Becks, C. K. Fox, Harry Cunningham, Asa Cushman, R. T. Sinclair, James Charles, Mr. Lewis, Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, Alice Cushman, Ida Vernon and Mrs. T. J. Hind. The attraction consisted of the drama entitled "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which was kept on the bills until October 3d. On the 4th the "Streets of New York" was produced, and the following artists were added to the company:—Harry Hotto, George Johnson, G. F. Ketchum, Eliza Newton, Mrs. E. Wright and Lillie Vining. This play ran until November 6th, and on the 8th "Poor Humanity" was produced, in which Mr. W. Hoiston, an English comedian, appeared. Minnie Jackson, Florence Noble and Maria Andrews were added to the company. On the 16th the same bill was continued, with the addition of "A Bull in a China Shop." On the 23d a company appeared in the "Lost Child," and "The Lottery Ticket," to bad business. At the end of this week Mr. Holston withdrew, and on the 29th Yankee Robinson played a star engagement of six nights, appearing in "Darius Dutton." "A Bull in a China Shop" was continued during the week. On December 6th "Under the Gaslight," which had been revised and partly rewritten by its author, Augustin Daly, was produced, and enjoyed a run of four weeks. During this period Charles T. Parsloe, Jr., and Marie Longmore appeared in addition to the regular company. On January 3d, 1870, Mr. G. L. Fox reappeared, after a prolonged absence in the west and south, where he had performed in his pantomime of "Humpty Dumpty," in the drama entitled "The Writing on the Wall," which was played until the 15th. Harry Lyner was added to the company. On the 17th the bill was changed to "Paul Pry" and "Robert Macaire," and again on the 31st to "The Serious Family" and "The Spitfire," which enjoyed a run of two weeks. On February 14th a burlesque on the tragedy of "Hamlet," with G. L. Fox in the title role, was produced, which achieved a great success, and ran nine consecutive weeks. On its production many of the principal artists of the company retired, only the minor people being retained, and the following additions were made:—Belle Howitt, Fanny, Laura and Julia Queen, Mrs. Bradshaw, Blanche Bradshaw, Ben Maginley and Lester Cavendish. The latter appeared but a few nights only. The burlesque was withdrawn on the 16th of April to give place on the 18th to a burlesque on "Macbeth," which proved comparatively a failure. It was, however, continued upon the bills until May 7th, when the season closed. The theatre remained closed one week, and on the 14th a summer season was inaugurated, with Mrs. James A. Oates and her burlesque troupe, who made their first appearance in this city in a burlesque entitled "The Fair One with a Blonde Wig," which was played for four consecutive weeks. On June 11th Mrs. Oates appeared in "The Daughter of the Regiment," which was played during the week. On June 18th, the troupe returned to burlesque in the "Field of the Cloth of Gold," which was played until July 2d. A change of bill was made for the last night of the season, July 4th, which was also set apart for the joint benefit of Dan Symons, the business manager; John Sutton, the treasurer, and Mr. Knapp, the doorkeeper. The receipts for the season, according to the internal revenue returns, were as follows:—September, 1869, $20,991; October, $24,661; November, $26,504; December, $23,895; January, 1870, $19,869; February, $20,666; March, $20,484; April, $20,274; May, $20,493; June not yet received. The Olympic will remain closed until the second week in August, probably, when Mrs. Oates and her company will present themselves in a new burlesque, to be succeeded by G. L. Fox and his new pantomime.

W. J. FLEMING, who has been traveling with Zoe's Combination, and playing the leading parts, arrived in town June 29th. He will visit the White Mountains during the summer.

OFFENBACH'S "BARBE BLEUE" was produced on June 28th at the theatre connected with the Terrace Garden. Theodore Habelman appeared as Barbe Bleue, and Pauline Canissa as Boniolette.

DR. TIVO, the recent business manager of the Parepa Rosa Opera Troupe, sailed for Naples, Italy, June 28th, to visit his parents, after which he will make a tour of the principal cities of the continent in search of musical attraction for the approaching season.

MISS MARIAN TAYLOR, who has but recently returned from London, whither she went in pursuit of Manager Simpson, to obtain from him a certain amount of "shekels" due her for professional services rendered him at Wood's Museum, in this city, and which she recovered through the aid of that powerful engine and terror of evil doers, the law, commenced a brief star engagement at the Bowery Theatre on Monday evening, June 27th, when she produced, for the first time in America, an amusing burlesque written by the late Wm. Brough, Esq., entitled "Prince Amabel," in which she enacted the title role. Miss Taylor may be considered one of the best burlesque actresses that have been wafted hither from the shores of Albion. She possesses a handsome, expressive face, a faultless figure, a good singing voice of much compass, thoroughly under control and well cultivated, and is, in addition, a good dancer, all which qualifications which unite to form a good burlesque actress. She quickly established herself as a favorite with the patrons of this house, and will ever be heartily welcomed whenever she chooses to pay them a visit. It would be futile to attempt to convey an idea of the burlesque on paper, but we can unhesitatingly pronounce it good, and far superior to the average of those presented during the past year or two. Miss Taylor was gorgeously costumed, and the company acquitted themselves with a higher degree of credit than our anticipations lead us to expect. On Friday evening, July 1st, Mr. Oliver Doud Byron was the recipient of a benefit, when the following artists volunteered:—Miss Marian Taylor, Mr. Kate O'Neil, Nellie Johnson, Ella Wesner, J. W. Lingard, J. H. Chatterton, Mart. Quinlan, H. B. Phillips, Fayette Welch, George W. Farren, J. M. Ward, Harry G. Clarke and S. H. Forsberg. The bill consisted of five pieces, "Two Convicts," "Mechanical Toys," "Irish Heiress," "Pearney, the Baron" and "Rob Roy." Notwithstanding the array of talent and the personal popularity of the beneficiary, the house was only moderately filled threw out his leg three feet and a half at every step. I wouldn't give two cents to see a man who hadn't a body 3 ½ feet wide?' After a week's careful watching I am fully satisfied that the mar[illegible] pantomime commenced on and continued by the admirable John constitute the great secret of Mordaunt's success. In every character in which he has appeared in this city he has been so natural to look that he has enlisted the sympathies of the audience for the character instead of for the actor."

J. DELMON GRACE, an actor who is well and favorably known throughout the United States is, we regret to say, lying in an utterly helpless condition at Number 50 Winter street, Providence, R. I. In January, 1868, he returned from a professional visit to England, much impaired in health, which has interfered with his business to the extent that he has been unable to fulfil regular engagements. In September, 1869, he made his last appeal to the public in the form of a benefit. Since that time he has been gradually failing, and has lost the use of his hands and arms, and for the past four months has been as helpless as a child. He will be most happy to receive calls at any time from such members of the profession as may visit Providence, and we hope they will make a note of his address.

THE O'HARA TROUPE AND BRASS BAND were in Pittston, Pa., on the 29th and 30th of June. On the 29th they played "Lucretia Borgia" to a very slim house. On the 30th they did not perform on account of rain. They went thence to Wilkesbarre.

CHARLES BARTON HILL returns from London and will assume the position of stage manager and leading man at Mrs. Drew's Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, for the coming season.

MISS AMY SEDGWICK, comedienne, will make a professional visit to this country during the coming season, having been engaged by Mr. Samuel Colville.

ALBERT W. AIKEN will commence a season of six nights on July 4th at the Trimble Opera House, Albany, N. Y., appearing in the "Witches of New York," supported by a company of New York artists.

LOLA MONTEZ never had any children, yet reports are constantly appearing in the papers of the début of a daughter of this eccentric artist, the last being "A daughter of the celebrated Lola Montez" has just made her début as a dancer at one of the principal theatres in Germany.

MISS LENA PRENTICE received a complimentary farewell benefit at the Academy of Music, Indianapolis, July 1st.

PETER F. SHERRY died in Philadelphia on the 30th of June, after a severe illness. He was 37 years of age, and during the past four years had acted as agent for his brother's—James F. Sherry—traveling dramatic company.

THE DRAMA IN BOSTON is thus noticed by our correspondent under date of July 2d:—"The Museum season has been continued all through the past week, with the 'Octoroon,' which has proved quite a success, as it well deserves, for nothing like it, either in the way of acting, scenery or appointments has been done here for a long while. Next Monday, 4th, we see the closing performance of the dramatic company, when a lively time will be had as the admirable comedy of 'Caste' will be given four times during the day and evening. Harry Crisp, a well known actor of the Howard Athenæum a few years back, has been engaged for juveniles at this house next season. The Craig Burlesque Opera Troupe opens the summer season on Tuesday evening, July 5th, with 'Don Juan.' In the troupe are Robert Craig, Harry Josephs, Mary Cary and several others, well and favorable known in these parts.....The Boston Theatre and Olympic still remain with doors closed in secret session. The rumor is once more around to the effect that Stuart Robson will be low comedian at this establishment for the coming season.....The Museum opened its doors on Tuesday evening, June 28th, with a new drama entitled the 'Battle of Gettysburg,' presented for the first time in Boston, and said to have been very successful elsewhere. The cast was as follows:—Little Eddie, Miss Emma Chase; George Clayton, E. R. Dalton; Old Grayton, a veteran of 1812, C. L. Parsloe; Col. Fielding, Ferdinand Wright; Little Hans, Gus Williams, with Dutch songs, etc.; Zeb, Tom Hampton; Hughey, Mr. Collins; Arthur, Mr. Nugent; Old Hans, Mr. Malbury; Dan, Beaver; Dennis, Graham; Walter, Salter; Gen. Longstreet, Munroe; Gen. Ewell, Plummer; Col. Johnston, Whelan; The Commodore, Ward; Captain Co. B, Murray; Captain Co. C, Fitch; Louise, May Nugent; Edith, Jennie Pearson; Mrs. Clayton, Mrs. D. Bowers; Mabel, Little Mac; and old Goddess of Liberty, Miss E. Stanley. The military part of the drama was presented by the noted Montgomery Light Guard, who were lately so serviceable in 'Not Guilty.'

ROBERT FOX, of the American, Philadelphia, outlives all opposition, no matter who or what it may be or whence it comes. This week he has the field to himself. Tony Pastor and a portion of his forces have been performing at the American for the past two weeks, closed on July 2d, but Mr. Fox has added to his forces several fresh performers, among them being Miss Lillie Hall. John Mulligan, who is a great favorite in the Quaker city, has been re-engaged. C. D. Gardner, Sam Devere, G. R. Roome, M'lle De Rosa, Charles Vivian, R. Harrison, John Shay, Ed. Banker, J. W. Wesley and Master Martin are also in the company, so that what opposition is brought to bear against Manager Fox he manages to come out first best at the end of the struggle.

OF THEATRICALS IN ALBANY, N. Y., our correspondent, "Beppo," writes:—"At the Trimble Opera House the 'Fernande' troupe, under the management of J. M. NIXON, opened on the 27th ult. to a moderate house. They were billed for one week, but only played three nights. About one hundred chairs had been sold during the day for the fourth performance, the 30th, but the treasurer refunded the money."

AT THE NATIONAL THEATRE, Albany, N. Y., B. C. McCall received a benefit on July 2d, when "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was performed. This gentleman is engaged at the Trimble Opera House for the next season.

OUR CHICAGO, ILL., CORRESPONDENT "Amusement," gives the following summary of the week's amusements in that city: "The 'Green Huntsman' is in its fourth and last week. Artistically it has proven a grand success. During the week the De Lavo Girls, Zoe and Lila, are doing some new feats; among them Zoe turns a somersault in the Niagara leap to a single rope suspended on the stage. They elicit nightly the most enthusiastic applause. The elegant Sangali 'Can Can,' under the title of 'Zephyrs,' is encored nightly. Next Monday, 4th, two performances, matinee and evening, will be given for the benefit of the manager. Geo. J. Seagle, which will be the last of the 'Green Huntsman' in Chicago.....At the Dearborn Theatre, despite the hot weather, fair audiences have greeted the Lauri party.....At Aiken's Museum the new military comedy entitled the 'Lancers' was produced on the 27th of June. The scenery was pretty and appropriate, and the play well put upon the stage. The cast is a strong one and the acting good throughout. The principal characters were taken by Messrs. Seymour, Blaisdell, Padgett and Mrs. Berry. The 'Sea of Ice' has been given at the matinees. Five performances will be given on the 4th.....This, last week, the pantomime of the 'Fire Fiend' and 'Dot' were given. Agoust executed his wonderful juggling feats. Joe Murphy's Ethiopian eccentricities gained him a deserved encore, but the great feature of the week was the Asiatic Prince, Sadi of Java, the boneless man, whose contortions are wonderful. His ladder performance was enthusiastically received.....At McVicker's, the week commenced with only a moderate house, but made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers. After a long absence from our boards, McVicker appeared on June 27th, as Peter Pomeroy, in the play of 'Taking the Chances,'"

A LADY PROFESSIONAL, who can sing and who is prepared to invest as partner, is wanted by W. F., who advertises.

Musical.

MR. FOSTER (a brother of the late Stephen C. Foster, the well known musical composer), employed in the office of the Eclipse Oil Works, as a clerk, was burned to death in the conflagration of those works at Pittsburgh June 28th. The works were struck by lightning, and the supposition is that Foster was either killed or rendered insensible by the bolt, and afterwards consumed by the flames. Only a mass of charred bones was found, the flesh having been entirely consumed therefrom. The remains were identified by finding near them a knife and certain keys, which were at once recognized as belonging to Mr. Foster.

MRS. M. A. BLOIS was the recipient of a complimentary benefit at the Savannah Theatre, Savannah, Georgia, on Wednesday, June 29th.

DODWORTH'S ORCHESTRA, Harvey B. Dodworth conductor, gave their twenty-fourth summer evening concert at the Rink, in Clermont avenue, Brooklyn, on Tuesday evening, June 28th. The following soloists appeared:—William Popper, violoncello; Edward Butler, flute; A. Ziese, violin. The feature of the evening was "a musical panorama of Broadway, N. Y., in 1848," composed by Senchon.

THE ORATORIO OF "ESTHER, THE BEAUTIFUL QUEEN," was produced at Akron, Ohio, under the direction of Prof. R. W. Seager, June 30th and July 1st, with sixty vocalists.

THE WESTERN JUBILEE commenced at Belvidere, Ill, on June 29th. Mr. Wyman, of Boston, conducted a part of the programme, and there had been a battery of cannon from Chicago under charge of Lieut. Quinn and a squad of men.

A GOOD BARITONE SINGER, who plays bass, is wanted for the Berger Family Bell Ringers. Address E. P. Kendall, as per card elsewhere.

CAMPING OUT.—The Juniata Club, a musical organization of Philadelphia, has completed its arrangements for the summer camping. The locality chosen is in the vicinity of Stroudsburg, about two and a half miles from the Delaware Water Gap. The club starts on the 15th of July, taking with them their big tent, organ and other equipments, together with a corps of fine instrumental and vocal musicians.

LONG BRANCH is to be favored during the summer with a series of entertainments consisting of light operas and concerts, both vocal and instrumental, which will be given with appropriate scenery, costumes and accessories. The dining room of the Continental Hotel is now being fitted up for the purpose, and the first performance will be given, it is anticipated, about July 12th. Among the artists engaged to appear during the summer, are Miss Rosa Cook, Mme. Varian Hoffman, Miss Clara Perl, Miss Gebele, Sig. Filippi, Mr. Henry Drayton, Sig. Randolfi, Sig. Fossetti, and many others; among the latter are Miss Kellogg, Mme. Gazzaniga, Mme. Anna Bishop, Sig. Lefranc, and Sig. Brignoli.

J. M. MAYNARD, dramatic leader, late of Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio, can be engaged for the fall and winter season. His address is in another column.

JOHN A. STEVENS, late manager of the Vicksburg Theatre, has engaged Senorita Josefina Filomena, violinist; Juan Soleeda and a corps of artists for a concert tour. They gave two concerts at the Theatre in Memphis, Tenn., June 24th and 25th, which were slimly attended, owing to the excessive heat. They went hence to Cincinnati.

MISS CLARA PERL, assisted by Henry Kowalski, Mme. Kowalski, Mlle. de Bussy, soprano; Carl Warnen, violoncellist, and Miss Aug. Hoerner, accompanist, gave one grand concert at St. Patrick's Hall, Montreal, Canada, on Friday evening, July 1st. W. F. Kotch is the business manager of the troupe.

THE PROGRAMME of a concert says:—"During the evening a variety of songs may be expected too tedious to mention." Hope we may not receive "complimentary" tickets to any such "entertainment."

NICK JULIEN GOODALL gave a concert at Groton, N. Y., on June 15th, assisted by Dr. F. S. Howe and S. Green, and on the 25th and July 1st he cut red for the musical public of Homer. Managers can secure his services by addressing him as per advertisement.

CLARK SIDMAN, pianist, advertises that he can be engaged for the coming season.

THE BRIGNOLI OPERA TROUPE will produce the opera o "Il Trovatore" July 4th, at St. James' Hall, Buffalo, with Miss McCullough, Miss F. de Gebele, Petrelli, baritone; Foscini, basso; Signor Locatelli, and Signor Giorza, musical director. A good chorus and orchestra are with the troupe. They sang "Martha" in Elmira, N. Y., July 2d.

JEANIE WATSON AND MR. J. F. HARDY, Scotch vocalists, will sing in concert at the Opera House, Elmira, on July 7th.

Variety Halls.

W. S. CAVANAGH was presented with a diamond badge, valued at $150, by the managers and company of the Howard Athenæum, Boston, on June 27th. The presentation speech was made by Mr. A. B. Kennedy. Mr. Cavanagh will sail for Europe by the Helvetia, July 9th, returning in the fall to take the full charge and management of Spaulding and Bidwell's Variety Troupe, at the Academy of Music, New Orleans.

BUSINESS AT THE TAMMANY HALL, Bay City, Mich., for the past week has been good, writes our correspondent, with Rinaldi, who then demanded his expenses, which Arlington has promised to pay him on arrival. Arlington refused to pay, and, words being handled, a personal collision resulted, in which, however, neither suffered serious injury. Rinaldi then preferred an attachment against Arlington, and proceeded with the sheriff to the theatre to take the money received at the box office, but in this Arlington had anticipated him, and the result was a failure. After the performance Rinaldi and the sheriff proceeded to Arlington's room and entering his room, attached his trunk. The matter was brought before a justice of the peace, and Arlington gave bonds in the sum of $300 to appear for trial on July 11th, when all the facts in the case will be elicited."

CHARLEY PETTINGILL, we are very glad to learn, is not so seriously ill as had been reported, judging from a note we received from him on the 30th, which was written by his own hand, bold and free, in which he states that he is at present gaining health rapidly, being able to take short walks in the street and in his garden at home, and hopes by the advent of the fall to be entirely recovered, so as to resume the duties of his profession. The disease which has confined him to the house is hemorrhage of the lungs, brought on by over exertion, which completely prostrated him and left him in a very critical state. Charley's many friends will be pleased to hear of the improved state of his health.

COOL WHITE, stage and business manager, interlocutor and burlesque actor, states, through an advertisement, that he is prepared to accept engagements for the summer season.

BRYANT'S MINSTRELS opened a season of six nights at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, June 27th, and met with a very warm reception. They open at the Pittsburgh Opera House on July 4th, for one week.

A PARTNER, who can furnish capital, is wanted to act as treasurer for an organized minstrel troupe and brass band. Address Leader, as per advertisement.

SAM BASSETT'S MINSTRELS, Legrecia the conjuror, J. W. Andrews and James Barry, the Regent troupe of trained birds, performing white mice and Russian cat, with gitts attached, commenced a brief engagement at the Opera House, Newark, N. J., July 1st.

DAN SHELBY'S MINSTRELS were at Decatur, Ill., June 28th.

MANNING'S MINSTRELS, at Wood's Theatre, in Cincinnati, have not been doing as well as at first, according to our correspondent, who says:—"The warm weather has prevented anything indoors from attracting, and consequently the boys will close up on the 4th, with a couple of performances, though they would like to have remained until the 1st of August, when they are to re-commence in Chicago. During the interim they will play in Lexington, Louisville, Indianapolis and St. Louis. The Red Stocking nine visited the theatre last (Thursday) night, by invitation, and Andy McKee performed his acting and dance in their uniforms, creating a decided hit. The main feature of the programme this week has been a farce called 'The Mysterious Hogshead,' performed by Hart, McKee, Manning, Dunnie and Myron Lewis. Their season, on the whole, will be a pecuniary success."

GEORGE CORE has been secured for Carncross and Dixey's Minstrels, Philadelphia, for next season.

THE PRINCESS THEATRE, Boston, the Shelby opera-stars have met with good success, although their audiences have never been at all crowded. The entertainment they give is a capital one, and is free from anything the least objectionable. Last week the first part was particularly good. J. H. Murphy sang "Daisy O'Lynn" very nicely; Pete Lee was extremely funny in "Rose Jane;" C. B. Edmunds gave "She is Waiting for us Yet" with great feeling, and Goffing, J. A. Baquie rendering of the "Porter Song" was good; G. Swaine Buckley convulsed the house by his admirable singing of "Kiss but Never Tell" and "Pompey's Marriage." These, with the usual jokes, conundrums, &c., make a good first part. Hogan and Hughes opened the second part with the double song and dance, "Riding in a Street Car," which was encored, and which they gave way for Pete Lee's "Pathetic Ballad," as it is called, but a more laughable pathos it would be difficult to find. Buckley followed in his act called "Music on the Brain," which was very good indeed. Basquin then gave some selections from opera, which were well received. Hogan and Hughes then gave a double jig in capital style, and the performance closed with a burlesque on "Lucretia Borgia." Medora was favorably received as the fiddler, and Buckley as Genarro was very funny, singing also capitally. Pete Lee was ludicrous in the extreme as Orsini, and Hughes as the Body Guard was first rate in make up and in acting. This troupe were to remain but one day longer, Fourth of July, when they were to give three performances.

HOLLINGSHEAD'S FEMALE MINSTREL TROUPE gave two performances at the Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., July 1st and 2d, to good audiences.

EMERSON'S MINSTRELS exhibited at Music Hall, Milwaukee, June 27th and 28th.

DUPREE AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS are billed to appear at Music Hall, Milwaukee, Wis., July 8th and 9th.

HENRY BEST, of the Quickhambers boat club, and Wm. Scharff, of the Mercantile club, finally arranged to row three miles on the lower Monongahela course, Pittsburgh, on the 6th of August, for $250 a side.

J. M. FRENCH'S CIRCUS will exhibit in Taunton, Mass., July 5th.

THE LION HOAX.—George J. Guilford, the General Agent of James Robinson's Great Circus and Animal Show, writes us from Council Bluffs, Iowa, July 3d, thanking us for denying the absurd and senseless story (which appeared in many papers, and originating in St. Louis, probably) concerning the killing of several members of Sexton's band by the lions of Robinson's show, and saying that this "stupid hoax" did not originate with either of the agents or the writer of the circus, and that none deprecate it more than they. We are glad to learn that Mr. Robinson's agents had nothing to do with this cruel hoax.

LEONARD GOELLER, tumbler and horizontal bar performer, advertises that he can be engaged for the season of 1870-71.

THE GREAT AUSTRALIAN CIRCUS AND TRAINED ANIMALS exhibited at Huntington, L. I., June 30th; Sag Harbor, July 1st; Greenpoint, 2d, and will be at Riverhead, July 4th; Patchogue, 5th, and Babylon, 6th. Mons. Leon, with his performing dogs, has joined this troupe. Miss Minnie Wells and her performing lions are creating a sensation.

HEMMINGS, COOPER AND WHITBY'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS will exhibit at St. Louis one week, commencing July 4th.

DAN CASTELLO'S CIRCUS exhibits July 4th at Marquette, Michigan.

CHAS. E. BOSTWICK, whose address is in another column, is prepared to make arrangements to keep circus horses during the winter.

A PAVILLION has been erected on the Jackson street lot, San Francisco, for the accommodation of the Oriental Circus, which was billed to show June 27th.

D. O. GRADY'S CIRCUS exhibits July 4th at Gallon, Ohio; Nevada, 5th; Upper Sandusky, 6th; Carey, 7th; McCutchinsville, 8th; and Tiffin, 9th. On the 1st of July, while they were at Shelby, Ohio, they received by rail a new band chariot, and added to the show a fat boy and girl by the name of Powers, the former weighing 580 and the latter 700 pounds.

Miscellaneous.

THE ASSEMBLY HALL, Middletown, N. Y., is advertised to rent. It will seat about one thousand persons and has a stage with scenery, &c.

THE MAIN STREET OPERA HOUSE, Johnstown, Pa., seems to be well adapted to the wants of traveling professionals, it being spacious and fitted up with all necessary appurtenances and conveniences, at least so states the proprietor through a card, and he refers to several people who have used his house.

[illegible] ARBOGAST, light and heavy balancer and lightning drill performer, met with a severe accident while passing through Fulton, Ill., on June 20th, on his way to join Yankee Robinson's Circus, and he is at present laid up there suffering from the injuries received. Our correspondent informs us that he let a wheel, weighing a hundred and ninety-five pounds, fall upon his head, and although his skull was not fractured, still a scalp wound over two inches long was the result. The wheel must have been very soft or the head unusually hard.

GRACE EGERTON and Mr. George Case gave their dramatic sketches in Truro, Nova Scotia, June 28th.

MME. THEODORA PRICE, wire walker, while performing at Ishpeming, Mich., on June 25th, met with quite a serious accident. As he was igniting some fireworks, with which he was surrounded on the wire, they exploded and burned his hand so severely as to deprive him of the use of it for several days.

ANDERSON, the illusionist, gave three performances at Ishpeming, Mich., commencing June 23d, and opened in Menominee June 24th.

THE LEWIS BROS.' GRAND CULMINATION opened in Laramie City, Wyoming Ter., June 25th, for three nights, and showed in Bryan, 26th and 30th, and Rawlings, July 1st. The show was billed for Ogden, Utah Ter., July 2d, 4th and 5th, and from thence it goes to Salt Lake City. Business is reported as good with this party.

TRAINED DOGS and an educated monkey are advertised for sale by J. Vance Bell.

HON. GIDEON B. EDWARDS, the orator, arrived at Murfreesboro', Tenn., on June 25th, and was to leave on the following day for Winchester.

THE VICTORELLIS and Sussie Braddon can be addressed care of this office.

W. REED, business manager and advance agent, advertises that he is prepared to negotiate with responsible managers for the season of 1870 and '71.

A CURIOSITY, in the shape of what is called a Mastodon's skull, has recently been exhumed in Pike Co., O., and is at present on exhibition in Cleveland. The proprietors advertise it for sale.

C. AUBURY BAUCH, since the death of his wife, has been rusticating at Hudson, Mass., where he will remain during the heated term.

MISS HOLCOMB, tumblerionelonist, can be secured for the coming fall.

OLIVE LOGAN and her "Guris" arrived in San Francisco on June 23d.

ALBERT SOTHERN, business manager for Martino, the Wizard, is about to start from Buffalo for a short tour as agent for the Milionian Tableaux; J. W. Stockbridge, proprietor, but will rejoin Martino on September 1st.

THE DAVENPORT BROTHERS, spiritual mediums, exhibited at Music Hall, Milwaukee, Wis., June 29th and 30th.

THE VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT at the Academy of Music, Albany, is attracting good audiences. Billy Carter, with his banjo, has made a hit. Maggie Willet is well received in her songs. The Academy will close for the season, with a benefit to W. Veeder, the manager, on July 5th.

TONY DENIER advertises that he will shortly be prepared to accept engagements for the coming season for himself and troupe. His address is care of this office.

KATHLEEN O'NEIL, comedienne and Irish vocalist, advertises that she can be engaged through Colonel T. A. Brown.

Negro Minstrelsy.

DAN SHELBY'S MINSTRELS gave one performance at the Opera House, Quincy, Ill., June 28th. Our correspondent, "Nimrod," says:—"Notwithstanding the intense heat, they were received by a large audience. Dan is an old favorite here. Shelby and Luke Schoolcraft, the end men, kept the audience in the best of humor, the most of their witticisms and jokes being new to this locality. James Gulick appeared as interlocutor. In the olio Fox and Ward gave a song and dance styled 'The Rival Lovers,' which made a hit and was loudly encored. Schoolcraft, in his Dutch specialties, was one of the features of the evening. 'The Servant's Legacy' concluded the performance."

SOME TROUBLE OCCURRED AMONG THE MINSTRELS in St. Louis on June 26th. A correspondent says:—"William Arlington, of Arlington's Minstrels, who were playing at De Bar's Opera House, engaged Johnny Enright, song and dance man, to leave Skiff and Gaylord's troupe and join his forces on the date above, at which time Enright reported for duty in St. Louis. But Arlington, finding that business was bad, and that he might be compelled to close his season shortly, endeavored to ignore the engagement with Enright, who then demanded his expenses, which Arlington has promised to pay him on arrival. FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

Dramatic.

OUR ADVICES FROM LONDON contain very little news. Considering that it is midsummer, the number of theatres remaining open is large. One or two houses have shut their doors, but at the majority the performances are continued. The Surrey closed its doors June 15th.....There has been no change there our last at the Haymarket.....At the Princess "La Perichole," with M'lle Schneider, was positively announced for June 20th, to be preceded by the operetta entitled "Les Pantins de Violaine;" but, after all, a change of bill occurred June 20th. "Paul Pry," with Mrs. John Wood as Phebe, Mr. Lionel Brough as Paul Pry, Maggie Brennan as Harry Stanley, and William Farren as Col. Hardy, was produced with new scenery and costumes. "La Belle Sauvage" still concludes the performances. E. F. Hingston, the acting manager of this house, received a benefit on Wednesday, June 22d, when, in addition to "Paul Pry" and "La Belle Sauvage," a drama by J. Alberry, entitled "Doctor Darey," was produced. The following artistes volunteered:—Mr. Hermann Vezin, Mr. Shore, Mr. David Evans, Miss Rachel Mellor, Mrs. Charles Horsman, the Hanlon-Midgetts and the cast of the Lilliputian Lancers.....At the Lyceum, "Ye Owen Rival," Offenbach's operetta, "Breaking the Spell," and the opera bouffe, "Little Faust," constituted the attractions.....At the Olympic "Little Em'ly" was produced June 27th.....At the Strand Miss Ellen Holt is engaged.....Mad. Sainton on June 23d as Zaid Darsday, in the "Field of the Cloth of Gold".....At the Prince of Wales' "M. P." still holds the bills.....No change has occurred at the Queen's, the Holborn nor the Vaudeville.....At the Standard Mr. Benjamin Webster, Henry J. Byron, Mr. Alfred Mellon, Miss Furtado and the Adelphi company appeared June 20th and during the week in "Not Such a Fool as He Looks," "One Touch of Nature," and the burlesque, "The Babes in the Woods".....At the Gresian, June 20th, Meller's company of "Maiden Imaginaire" was produced, under the title of the "Robust Invalid."

MRS. WARD'S—an American lady—private theatricals are the great attraction in Paris just now. Among the spectators at the last performance June 26th were Mme. Lyons, Count Persigny, M. Chevalier and other distinguished persons.

MLLE. BEATRICE has formed a company to play "Fron-Fron" in the provinces, which commenced a season of eighteen nights on June 20th, at the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool. The following artists comprise the company:—Messrs. Henry Sinclair, G. Loredan, R.

BRITISH BLONDE
BURLESQUE TROUPE,
Comprising the following eminent artists,

ROSE MASSEY, ELIZA WEATHERSBY,
ADA HARLAND, KATE HEATHCOTE,
CARRIE THOMPSON, SARAH HARLAND,
G. F. KETCHUM, MAURICE DE SOLLA, E. H. CHAPMAN
and
HARRY BECKETT,
Stage Director of the Troupe.

Now on their first annual tour through the United States, at present performing at

MAGUIRE'S OPERA HOUSE,
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,

where their success has been far greater than any company or artist that has preceded them, the houses having been literally crowded and hundreds turned away nightly, unable to gain even standing room.

THEIR REPERTOIRE OF BURLESQUES consists of

LUNA, FORTY THIEVES,
SINBAD THE SAILOR,
LA SONNAMBULA,
WILLIAM TELL,
MAID AND THE MAGPIE,
IXION
Etc., Etc., Etc.,

for the production of which they have
AN ENTIRE COMPANY,
ALL THE ORIGINAL MUSIC,
MAGNIFICENT APPOINTMENTS,
and the
MOST GORGEOUS COSTUMES.

The following are a few of the extracts selected from many hundreds published in the California Journals:—

THE BRITISH BLONDES must have been greatly encouraged and elated by the spectacle at Maguire's Opera House last evening. It was packed full in every part, and they were received with oft repeated and tumultuous applause. There was a lively distribution of encores, and such a profusion of bouquets that the recipients seemed several times at a loss to know what to do with them, and tossed the tributes about with a recklessness that was quite amusing. The costumes of the principal artists were very brilliant. The scenery was quite good, and the moon's descent with "Diana" was very fine, as was also the closing tableau.—San Francisco Evening Bulletin, June 17, 1870.

THE BRITISH BLONDE BURLESQUE TROUPE were received with all the honors last night, a theatre crowded to its capacity and no end of enthusiasm, bouquets, baskets of flowers and recalls. When the curtain raised on "Luna" there was a hum of expectation until the representative of the "Chaste Goddess" came on, and then a storm of applause for the new star, Miss Rose Massey. She is beautiful, of symmetrical figure and has a graceful carriage, with the most lovely golden tresses. She was accepted at once as a favorite. She is as beautiful as a picture when the flood of light is thrown on her at the back of the stage, and she knows how to choose a graceful and picturesque attitude to best display her beauty. Miss Eliza Weatherby (another handsome blonde) as Endymion shared in the applause and received the larger number of bouquets for her singing. She has a nice voice and rings well. Miss Ada Harland as Cupid attracted a good deal of attention by her dancing and singing. She has a pleasant face and grew in favor with each scene of the burlesque. Mr. Harry Beckett, the low comedian of the troupe, made an immense hit as Actaeon, and especially in his singing of little local allusions in the A B C song. Mr. G. F. Ketchum as Pan was hardly less successful than Mr. Beckett.—Daily Alta California, San Francisco, June 17, 1870.

THE FIRST APPEARANCE OF THE BLONDE BRIGADE, last night, drew a house so crowded that there was scarcely room to breathe. In every part of the theatre a dense crowd of anxious expectants were packed in as tight as the seats could hold them. The performance commenced with the farce of "To Oblige Benson," in which Mr. Harry Beckett proved at once his claim to be considered a first rate comedian. There is no discount on that. It is so, and we can with pleasure record his complete success. Miss Eliza Weathersby also played Mrs. Southdown with much spirit, and made her position sure with the audience. "Luna" was produced, Miss Weatherby appearing as Endymion, Miss Rose Massey as Diana, Miss Ada Harland as Cupid and Mr. Beckett as Actaeon. The first named lady is a pretty, plump and lively body, with an enjoue manner and a pleasant voice. Miss Massey is a tall, exquisitely formed girl, possessing limbs of the most perfect symmetry. Her "Love among the Roses" was vehemently encored. Miss Harland is a capital dancer and very graceful. The great success of the evening was the series of nonsensical verses sung by the above named artists, which were rendered four times, each time producing a new set of verses, from the apparently inexhaustible repertoire of the performers. Much laughter and applause rewarded the performers during the evening for their exertions.—San Francisco Daily Morning Call, June 17th, 1870.

THE BRITISH BLONDE BURLESQUE BRIGADE, who came tripping on on Thursday evening, were warmly received by a large audience. To see them is to be startled, dazzled, fascinated, overcome with admiration. They are all "stars" in their peculiar line, and are as perfect in burlesque as the most ardent admirer of this style of performance could desire. They opened in a very amusing burlesque entitled "Luna." The bloodless Dian dance and act superbly; their costumes are rich and gorgeous and the house has been crowded to overflowing. They will doubtless fill the Opera House for several weeks.—Golden City, San Francisco, June 19, 1870.

ON THURSDAY one of the largest audiences ever assembled in Maguire's Opera House congregated together to witness the opening performance of the far famed BRITISH BLONDES. The entertainment commenced with the farce, "To Oblige Benson," in which Miss Weathersby appeared as Mrs. Trotter Southdown, and Harry Beckett as Mr. Trotter Southdown. These two established themselves at once in the favor of the audience. Beckett is an excellent comedian and certain to become a great favorite. Miss Weathersby possesses a splendid figure and expressive countenance. The burlesque of "Luna" followed, introducing the whole blonde troupe; Miss Eliza Weathersby appeared as Endymion, and charmed the audience with her handsome person, fine singing and graceful dancing; Miss Ada Harland, as Cupid, led the troupe as a dancer, and received much applause for her performance. Miss Rose Massey appeared as Diana, goddess of hunting, and afterwards as Luna; Miss Massey is a striking handsome young girl; she is tall, graceful and exquisitely shaped. Mr. Harry Beckett as Actaeon made a great hit, more especially in a series of nonsensical but witty verses, in which well known local characters were touched off. Mr. Ketchum was scarcely less successful. The leaders of the troupe are excellent singers and accomplished actors. The second and third nights of the blondes were no less successful than the first. The Saturday matinee was densely crowded. At the express desire of many ladies there will be a grand "Luna" matinee on Wednesday afternoon.—Golden Era, San Francisco, June 19, 1870.

Regarding the burlesque of the period, we went to Maguire's, expecting great things and were blessed to exactly that extent. The new company is good. If there is a leveller, better formed, or more graceful girl than Rose Massey anywhere we are willing to hold a competitive examination and report on the subject. Ada Harland, who does Cupid, has a very nice face, and both sings and dances well. Eliza Weatherby (Endymion) is a pogunant, jolly blonde, who carries all before her. Harry Beckett is undoubtedly a first rate low comedian and showed to advantage in the burlesque. G. F. Ketchum dressed and acted a very comical Pan. Maguire's burlesque season promises to be a decided success.—San Francisco News Letter, June 18, 1870.

THE BRITISH BLONDES, who made their debut before the San Francisco public at Maguire's Opera House, on Thursday evening, have taken the city by storm. Indisputable evidence of that fact was furnished by the enthusiastic demonstrations of pleasure which their performances have elicited from the densely crowded audiences that filled the theatre to overflowing the last two nights. Many persons on each evening were turned away on account of the lack of space in any part of the auditorium to accommodate them. The dramatic attractions chosen by the blonde troupe to begin their irresistibly charming assault on our theatre going public are the comedy of "To Oblige Benson," and a burlesque of "Luna." The former piece serves to introduce the company, and places them on the very best terms with their auditors, preparing them to be captured en masse by the second part of the entertainment. The performances of last evening passed off with even more eclat than upon the opening night. A better comedian than Harry Beckett has never been seen on the stage of this city, and his equal in burlesque acting has never visited this coast. His coadjutor, Mr. Ketchum, is extraordinarily comical, and is also a capital actor. Rose Massey, tall, graceful, exquisitely proportioned, Juno like in her style of beauty, who, as Luna, is transformed into a veritable Dido when the arrow of Cupid pierces her heart, again captivated the audience last evening. Her song and dance, "Love Among the Roses," achieved another triumph for the fair artiste. Miss Eliza Weathersby as the love lorn Endymion appears to excellent advantage, with her pleasing face, clear voice, distinct enunciation, finely developed form and winning manner. She was again the recipient of marked favors throughout the evening. Pretty, agile, scintillant Ada Harland, who dances like a fairy and sings beautifully, has become a special favorite. Miss Heathcote and the other members of the company are very efficient in their respective parts. The British Blondes are destined to prove popular favorites for a long season, if we may judge from the triumph they have already achieved.—San Francisco Figaro, June 18, 1870.

MAGUIRE'S OPERA HOUSE.—This popular theatre was crowded to suffocation last night (not an inch of room being unoccupied), when the famous British Blondes made their first appearance. The performance commenced with the comical farce, "To Oblige Benson," and in the character of Mr. Trotter Southdown Mr. Beckett at once proved to the audience that he was the very best low comedian who ever trod the boards of the San Francisco stage. The admirable manner in which he made all his points, the play of his features, and the expression he threw into his utterance, all betokened the finished artist. Mr. Beckett's fun is infectious; it sets the whole audience in a roar. Eliza Weatherby looked charming in the character of Mrs. Trotter Southdown, and played it in an unaffected, natural manner, which pleased every one. The audience, put in a thorough good humor by the farce, waited patiently during the interval which elapsed between its conclusion and the rising of the curtain on the first scene of the burlesque of "Luna." Miss Massey not only looks pretty but is a good burlesque actress, reading with thoroughly correct emphasis and very pleasing accent, and sings charmingly. Eliza Weatherby as Endymion looked so very pretty that it seemed a shame that she should not have the moon or anything else she cried for; her singing, dancing and acting were deliciously piquant. Ada Harland is a delightful little Cupid, sings beautifully and dances bewitchingly. Connie Thompson makes a pretty Arethusa. Miss Kate Heathcote as Endos, read, sang and acted well—but a carefully selected company of artists who all have talent and experience in their profession. G. F. Ketchum caused much amusement in the part of Pan. Maurice de Solla's fine voice was heard to advantage. E. H. Chapman was funny as the Doctor. We have not forgotten Harry Beckett, who throughout the piece seemed the spirit of mirth; he was very amusing throughout in the character of Actaeon, and performed one of the most wonderfully ludicrous dances ever seen on any stage. The same entertainment will be presented to-night, and those who are not pleased with it must indeed be of that class whom it is impossible to please.

THE BRITISH BLONDE BURLESQUE TROUPE will continue their Pacific Slope Engagement till September first, after which they will commence their GRAND ANNUAL TOUR THROUGH THE ATLANTIC STATES.

Managers of first class theatres only having nights open for this great combination should address SHERIDAN CORBYN, Manager, Care of COL. T. ALLSTON BROWN, Dramatic Agent,

MAIN ST. OPERA HOUSE,
JOHNSTOWN, Pa. Opened February, 1869. Handsomest Opera House of its size in the state. For rent by the day or week, for first class theatrical entertainments, concerts and lectures. This new brick building, with iron front, is now finished and fitted up in modern style, with parquet, dress and family circle, four private boxes and will seat 1,000 persons; 325 arm chairs in parquet, 300 seats in dress circle and 576 in family circle. It has three modes of exit, and can be emptied in ten minutes. Stage 34x33 feet, with carpet, stage furniture, tables, chairs, sofa, tete-a-tete, upholstered with fine damask and finished in white and gold; foot, border and side lights, seven dressing-rooms, green-room, water closet, water in dressing-rooms, hose connection on stage; also, an act, drop and green curtain, and a full set of scenery on flats and numerous set pieces, flats 12x16 feet, all painted and fitted up by L. W. Seavey, of New York. The auditorium and proscenium are handsomely frescoed, fitted up with figures of Shakespeare and surmounted by a large gilded eagle. This work was done by Thomas Heath, of Philadelphia. Well ventilated; ceiling 33 feet high, with fine chandeliers. Ticket office attached to the hall, and all complete. The proprietor would assure all persons favoring him with their patronage, that this is the popular house of the place, being the only one having perfect acoustic properties, and in which an audience can hear in all parts of the house, and the only one that is not used for county offices, and that one a wooden frame building. Johnstown contains 20,000 inhabitants and is situated on the Pennsylvania railroad, 78 miles east of Pittsburgh. Terms reasonable, including gas, license, heating and janitor. Post office, telegraph and job printing offices within twenty steps of the Opera House. Private entrance to the stage and dressing rooms. The proprietor refers to a few of the parties who have played at the Opera House, viz:—Canning & Henderson, 13 nights; Kate Raymond, in "Masepa," with her black mare, 9 nights; Miss Augusta L. Bargon, 13 nights; Mr. Post, with Louise Sylvester, 6 nights; George W. and Alice Harrison, 13 nights; J. Denier, 4 nights; Alf. Burnett, 2 nights; Prof. Anderson, 13 nights; W. H.
